MCGILL
Ex-Marines
Are Bores, But—

At the Marine boot camp on Parris Island, S. C., the Drill Instructor habitually greeted the straggly line of home-sick, self-conscious recruits, in their first appearance, with a few bleak phrases which almost invariably concluded:

"Your soul may belong to God, but your legs and body belong to me. Never forget it."

And they were never allowed to, as they were bullied-dammed through the weeks of training. They came to hate the D.I., the island, and the iron discipline, but felt all the while a slow-growing pride in themselves and the fact of belonging. They were welded together by certain intangibles and the unrelenting, never-ending pressure from the D.I., whom they fondly dreamed of shooting the next morning as a non-com in the field.

The Marines have never been indoctrinated with anything else but the corps and what it demands. The training seeks to screen out the weak. Recruits are not lectured on democracy or international politics, but on how to kill the enemy before he kills them. They somehow are made to feel they cannot let one another down or fail to live up to the rules of the Corps' record of the past. Without any doubt this spirit flows out of the harsh, exhausting, severe training they receive.

Bravery

They are not, of course, braver than other men. But, bravery alone is not a substitute for military success. Courage, in men ill-suited and untrained for warfare, merely dramatizes the need for sharp training. (Today your son will receive the training which will make him a superior combat man in the Air Force or Marines.)

The Magazine "Armed Forces" poses the problem thus:

"The nation is now reaping the harvest of an officially inspired 'momism' which had its beginning back in 1945, when the Army knuckled under to overwhelming political and home-front pressure to 'bring the boys home.' . . . In the effort to keep the ranks filled since World War II, every psychological device has been employed to make a service career appear like a cross between a glorified vacation, a travel tour and an interim training school for subsequent civilian employment. The one exception is the Marine Corps, the poster for which have, generally speaking—somewhere among the other blandishments and lures—also prominently stressed the word 'Fight!'"

Momism chiefly is what has filled up the psychological device for veterans. Without the crutch of "mom's" protection, they cracked up. Harold Martin, of our staff, but recently back from a combat correspondent tour in Korea, quoted North Koreans under interrogation:

"Those men with roots are easy to slip up on," they said, "they always stop to eat or sit down to write letters. But those men with legions (The Marines) don't ever quit looking when they stop." Glendon knew look for that in soldiers long ago.

Training

What they were saying, of course, was that the Marines were the only trained combat troops in the field. It is a somber fact that not until the Marines arrived did we have in Korea either mountain-trained combat units or close aviation support for front-line troops.

Korea has pretty well proved the Marines and the Navy to have been right in their insistence on having their own aviation. An over-all air-force command cannot do the job of providing ground strikes for which there is immediate need.

Mr. Truman made his apologies for his thoughtless, petty reference to Marine Corps "propaganda." It is a great pity he did not say he wished all units everywhere might have the sort of training which would give them, too, the same sort of "propaganda." There probably is no greater bore than an ex-Marine, but he loves and respects the Corps. It is odd, too, how the feeling reaches down to families. After the President's childish utterances about the Marines, the telephone and mail were both busy with answers from mothers and fathers of Marines, of the past wars and of this one.

We are going into a future which is to require of us that we become at least a semi-military nation. For the huge armed forces which we are building, we must provide not only the lure of travel, education and retirement pay, but the most severely disciplined combat training possible. This would include guerrilla, or commando training.

Korea may be a blessing in disguise. It revealed to us our pathetic weaknesses, our inadequacies in training and recruiting, as well as our national confusion.

2d Tax Aim,
George Says*Anti-Red Bill Veto
May Hold CongressBy ROBERT F. WHITNEY
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10, President Truman's announced intention of vetoing the McCarran Anti-Communist bill may prove to be the monkey wrench in the machinery and prevent adjournment of Congress next Saturday.

This was learned Sunday night as congressional tax leaders were holding President Truman's request for taxes to make the rearmament program a pay-as-you-go proposition.

In his speech Saturday night unveiling his plans for economic mobilization and controls, Mr. Truman said Congress "should enact further tax legislation as soon as possible."

To this, Sen. George, Democrat, Georgia, answered that Congress would soon start work on a second installment tax bill to collect about $7,000,000,000 more yearly.

However, it was made clear that such work would be purely preliminary, as the bill would not get definitive consideration until the 82nd Congress convenes next January.

Congressional leaders will go to the White House Monday morning to confer with the President. This meeting may have a big bearing on adjournment plans. But as of Saturday night, many members thought the Saturday goal would be attained.

However, a leading Democrat told a reporter Sunday night that adjournment might be postponed to prevent a pocket veto of the McCarran bill by Mr. Truman. Backers of this measure feel they have the strength to override a veto and thus hesitate to adjourn.

The McCarran bill, in addition to tightening espionage and sabotage laws, would require that Communist Party members and front organizations register.

The Senate has been debating it for several days and will start voting Tuesday afternoon. A similar measure has passed the House.

After the bill is finally enacted and sent to the White House, President Truman would have 10 days in which to approve it, veto it or allow it to become law without his signature.

Ship Wallows
In Storm Path

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Her engines lifeless, the Danish freighter Paris wallowed in the storm-churned Atlantic Sunday night. About 40 miles to the south a hurricane barreled toward the ship.

Earlier Sunday, the 2,360-ton vessel was taken into tow by the tanker Amtrak. But Coast Guard officials reported here that the line had been snapped.

The station said no attempts had been made to transfer the Paris' crew of 27 to the 14,131-ton Amtrak. The vessels were reported about 170 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras.

Better Arms Key To Victory—Acheson
Says New Weapons, Skill
Can Withstand Red Hordes

By JAY WALZ

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—Secretary of State Acheson declared Sunday night that numbers do not necessarily mean strength, and offered "modern weapons and ingenuity" as opposition to "all sorts of hordes." He was referring pointedly to hordes of Communist forces.

The Secretary also told a television audience it would be "sheer madness" for the Chinese Communist government to enter the Korean war on the side opposing the "free nations of the world."

The Secretary was questioned on a television program on the eve of important meetings of foreign ministers of Great Britain, France and the United States beginning Tuesday in New York City. Monday morning he will outline before members of the Senate and House Foreign Affairs Committees the policies he will advocate at the New York meetings.

As Acheson spoke, congressional leaders appeared to approve administration support of measures aimed at rearming Western Germany to the point of making this part of a former enemy country an integral part of Western defenses. (See story on Page 9.)

President Truman Saturday approved "substantial increases" in American troop strength in Europe, providing Atlantic Treaty allies aid to build up their own contributions to a common defense force.

Acheson's remarks were recorded, for convenience, earlier this week, but they were accepted as reflecting latest administration thinking on the general problems of U. S. foreign relations.

"I think we must put our major effort at the present moment into creating strong North Atlantic defense forces," Acheson said, in response to a question. "If we have those forces—strong, well-equipped, able and ready to deter aggression, then problems all over the world take on a different shape. Such forces alone will change problems in Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia, in the Middle East and the Far East."

In the course of his interview, Acheson was asked whether the Western Allies could bring together forces strong enough to resist an all-out attack.

Acheson replied: "I believe we can and I believe with modern weapons and ingenuity we can do again exactly what was done for so many centuries at the time of the Roman Empire."

"It doesn't make any difference that you are outnumbered. It depends on the strength of the organization, the superiority of your weapons. You can hold back

Reds Rush Over
Own Taegu Dead*UN Defenders Hold Fast
As Shells Rain on City

By FRANK TREMAINE

TOKYO, Monday, Sept. 11.—(UP)—Communist forces lobbed artillery shells into the outskirts of Taegu Monday and opened a frenzied charge against the U. S. 1st Cavalry Division lines north of the city.

With 40,000 North Koreans poised to strike the vital hinge city of the Allied front from three directions, the Reds made their first major assault from the north against the right flank of the 1st Cavalry eight miles above Taegu.

After a nightlong series of small-scale banzai attacks along the entire 1st Cavalry front, the Reds Monday morning charged down a hill directly into the American lines.

The U. S. guns poured a rain of small arms and artillery fire into the savage attackers, but the Communists charged on, leaping over the bodies of their fallen comrades. The U. S. lines appeared to be holding, however.

Eighth Army headquarters officers believed the assault from the north may be the start of a full-scale attempt to capture Taegu—once the temporary South Korean capital and still the nerve center of the United Nations' military operations.

The Eighth Army communiqué said the 1st Cavalry troops had repulsed the Red charges in the Kasan area north of Taegu but that other Red assaults had forced the American defenders back about 300 yards east of Waegwan, which is 12 miles northwest of Taegu.

From rooftops in Taegu, eyewitnesses saw gunfire in the southeastern outskirts of the town well behind the American lines early Monday. The skirmish apparently was between American or South Korean troops and Red infiltrators. Although the gunfire was in the vicinity of the Taegu airfield, that base still was in operation Monday.

The tension that existed in Taegu in the face of the new Communist threat was heightened Monday morning when an American Air Force plane mistakenly strafed the town. The pilot, believing he was over Kuncheon, 30 miles to the northwest, made three strafing runs over the heart of the city. There were some American casualties and some damage, the Air Force said.

American fighter planes and bombers blizzarded the attacking Communists with fire bombs north of Taegu, and ripped the Red lines in this area with bombing and strafing attacks.

The main effort by the Red artillery appeared to be to cut off the northern defenders of Taegu from their supplies by closing the main highway to the city.

North Korean attacks against the northern defenses of Taegu came shortly after Gen. MacArthur had announced gains by United Nations forces in two other critical sectors of the northern front and after several U. S. military leaders had expressed renewed confidence in the military outlook for the UN troops.

The scene of Monday morning's main assault was just south of the walled city of Kasan, scene of bloody fighting last week.

After reaching the fringe of Taegu with some of its shells during the night, the Red artillery this morning concentrated on the main Taegu-Tabu highway about five miles north of Taegu.

The first of the banzai charges Sunday night was directed against the First Cavalry Division central sector west of Tabu. Screaming wildly, the Communists charged into the American positions and pushed the GIs off a hill. However, the American counter-attack after daybreak and recaptured the lost ground, a front dispatch said.

An Eighth Army spokesman, in discussing the new assault, said the Communists were "waiting for nothing."

PEARL HARBOR, Sept. 10.—(AP)—A Navy transport plane, her fuel tanks empty, was ditched in the Pacific near Midway Island Sunday but within three hours all seven men aboard were rescued.

The Hawaiian Sea Frontier reported a PC boat picked up the seven men from a life raft tossed about by 12-foot waves. None of the men required medical assistance.

The men were picked up by the PC boat at 12:35 p. m. Hawaiian time (5:35 p. m. EST). The plane was ditched 47 miles south of Midway at 9:56 a. m. Hawaiian time (2:56 p. m. EST).

The four-engine RSD Douglas Skyraider, Navy counterpart of the Air Force C-54, still was afloat with the survivors.

Gen. Clark To Study Readiness Abroad

By JACK RAYMOND

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

FRANKFURT, Sept. 10.—Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of the United States Army field forces, arrived here Sunday announcing he had been directed to study the "combat readiness" of the American troops stationed in Germany as well as other areas outside the United States.

He said also that the first additional American troops would be sent to strengthen the garrison in the European command within four months in accordance with President Truman's announcement Saturday.

He said there would "not be much delay" in augmenting the American forces here, rejecting a suggestion that the bulk of reinforcements could not be brought over until next Spring. He would not say how many, but reliable sources are thinking in terms of at least five divisions.

Gen. Clark arrived in time for the large-scale American maneuvers which are to begin at dawn Monday. About 100,000 ground troops and airmen including French and British ground and air contingents will test tactics and resources against a mythical attack emanating from behind the Iron Curtain.

Tanks, artillery caissons, planes and the troops to move them moved into position Sunday night for the initial phase of "exercise rainbow," which begins with a western "retreat" calls for a regrouping phase, and finally concludes with a victorious counter-attack.

These games will go on for eight days, then on Sept. 24 the British will sponsor large-scale joint maneuvers, including American, French and Danish ground and air forces.

Gen. Clark was greeted at Rhein-Main airfield by General Thomas T. Handy, chief of the United States Army in Europe, and other local Army commanders.

Gen. Clark held a press conference in the visitors' lounge of the Terminal Building, first pointing out the nature of his mission. He said Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, had ordered him to make a report on the combat readiness of all American troops stationed outside the United States. He said that was a newly added duty of his.

The former Fifth Army Commander, who cited training technique used in Italy during the war, said he had brought new instructions for Gen. Handy to introduce "little indoctrination training" in this command. This type of training has already begun in the United States.

It involves soldiers in the firing of live ammunition at each other during war games. Turning away questions involving political aspects of German participation in Western European defense, Gen. Clark nevertheless responded to some technical questions of political interest in this area.

Asked how long it would take to create German divisions, Gen. Clark pointed out that in the United States it was possible to form a battle-ready division from raw recruits in nine months. He supposed that where it was "closer to the fire" there was a greater incentive and one could "do better than that."

Sunday afternoon troops from outside Germany, a reinforced American regiment from Austria, arrived at Rhein-Main airfield on an "airlift" preparatory to the maneuvers.

Of political interest here was

Pravda Accuses Truman Of Deliberate War Aim

MOSCOW, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Pravda accused President Truman and the United States government Sunday of carrying out step-by-step plans to unleash World War III—to be entitled "Preventive War."

Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, said in a leading editorial the President's latest radio speech was one more effort to prepare American public opinion for "new war adventures planned by Wall Street bosses."

The paper declared that American bombing of Chinese cities and "the groundless attack of 11 American planes on a Soviet airplane" fitted into President Truman's plans for broadened aggression.

Pravda said the true essence of the President's plans was blurred out by Gen. MacArthur, Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews and Harold E. Stassen in calls for preventive war against the Soviet Union.

President Truman ordered Gen. MacArthur to withdraw a statement to the Veterans of Foreign Wars that Formosa was vital to America's Far East defense and must remain in non-Communist hands. The President repudiated the recent Boston speech of Matthews in which the Navy Secretary said the U. S. should proclaim its willingness to start a war if necessary to compel co-operation for peace.

Stassen, who is President of the University of Pennsylvania, and a Republican, said Russia should be notified that war will be carried directly to her soil if "Communist imperialism forces" launch further aggression anywhere in the world. He said this should be done by congressional resolution and petition to the United Nations Assembly.

"The adventurous course of the rulers of the United States is pushing the country into open war," Pravda said.

"The ruling clique is going to all lengths to deceive the American people, conceal from it the true purposes of its foreign policy and compel it meekly to bear the yoke of preparation for a new war. It is just this which Truman tried to do in his speech."

The paper said the President was unable to conceal that "the aggression of the United States in

The Studebaker offer came after three months of negotiations and was accepted by a standing vote of members of CIO United Auto Workers Union, Local 5, in a mass meeting.

The agreement also provides an annual wage increase of four cents an hour for each of the five years and further adjustments geared to the cost of living index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

SLAVE LABORER?
Nathan Lepseter

Russia Said Holding Flier as Laborer

NUERNBERG, Germany, Sept. 10.—(AP)—An American flier reported missing in action over France six years ago was said by a German woman Sunday to be held as a slave laborer in the Russian zone of Germany.

Mrs. Brigitte Poellmann, 40, a Nuernberg insurance company employee, said in an interview that she had found Nathan Lepseter, missing U. S. Air Force sergeant, working in a factory at Koenigs-Wusterhausen, in Prussia, after a long search. She declined to divulge the circumstances that led to the meeting.

She said she had been asked to search for the missing soldier by Lepseter, who according to her information has lost his memory. Lepseter, of Brooklyn, N. Y., through a mutual friend, Mrs. Florence Baldy, who lives at Carson City, Nev.

(In Brooklyn, the Lepseters said Saturday they had heard this word from Mrs. Poellmann. They have always refused to believe their son is dead, despite the Air Force listing of "missing, presumed killed." They have spent an estimated $7,500 in sending out 24,000 photographs of their son and in running down clues which they thought might lead to him.)

Mrs. Poellmann said she started the search in 1949 after she obtained written approval by Allied authorities.

"And I even got the approval of a Russian colonel, Col. N. R. Pirogov, at the Soviet Occupation Headquarters at Karlshorst, near Berlin, to take up the search in the Russian zone," she said.

After none of the West German authorities she contacted had given any clues on the whereabouts of the missing airman, she crossed into the Russian zone.

South Korean bazooka men set off after him in a jeep, remaining respectfully out of range of his powerful gun. The tank roared on—only to run into a regiment of South Koreans who stopped him and made him prisoner.

The bazooka team drove up and claimed the tank as its prize. The first angry words of the day were exchanged between the bazooka men and the infantrymen who stopped the tank.

Capt. Gerald M. Woolcock, Bloomsburg, Pa., senior American adviser to the regiment, was called in to adjudicate but declined. He explained that the South Korean Government offers a prize of $50 for every captured tank.

"I suppose the argument will go on for a month," Woolcock said. Capt. Jean Faub, Macon, Ga., was called to question the tank commander. Explaining his capture, the North Korean said:

"I couldn't drive the tank and shoot, too." He presented Faub with his collar insignia as a souvenir and said he would have surrendered much sooner if he had known what a friendly reception he would get.

The tank's tank was the only one of 16 left in his battalion—the rest had been knocked out by mines or planes.

future war between the U. S. and Russia would not be of the "push button" variety, and urged major faith in defense be placed in foot soldiers.

UN Troops Feed, Capture Wrong-Way Red Tankman

By PETER KALISCHER

YONGCHON, Korea, Sept. 10.—(UP)—A North Korean "wrong-way Corrigan" drove his tank into Yongchon Sunday, was given lunch and then was captured when he drove the wrong way again in an attempt to escape.

The tank commander led a small detachment of Communist infantry into town. The infantrymen, too, were given lunch and then formally made prisoners.

Earlier Sunday morning, the South Koreans captured an enemy tank about four miles north and west of Yongchon. When they saw an identical tank—15 tons, mounting a 76-millimeter gun—coming down the road toward town, South Korean troops thought it was the captured one.

The tank got all the way into Yongchon with the infantrymen. It parked in a schoolhouse yard. There, it and the tank crew and the infantrymen were finally identified as an enemy force.

The South Koreans surrounded and disarmed them and then gave them a hearty lunch. Lunch over, the formalities of making the North Koreans prisoners of war were conducted. But the tank commander made a break, leaped into his tank, and roared off northward.

He picked the wrong road. A detachment of

40 A-Bombs in Red Pile, Sen. Long Tells Nation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(UP)—Sen. Long, Democrat, Louisiana, said Sunday he has heard Russia has about 40 atom bombs and could drop them on from 15 to 30 "leading American cities" within a week after any general war begins.

He said he had been told about the number of Russian A-bombs by military experts whom he did not identify.

If Russia is in position to carry out such pulverizing attacks, he said, the Government should warn the people so they will be aware of the danger.

Long, who appeared on the "Meet Your Congress" forum over a radio station, said "we know" that Russia has the bombs and the A-bombs to carry out such raids. But, he added, he isn't sure about the number of such bombs the Soviets possess.

He said he thinks it is pretty certain the Russians could drop the bombs on any targets they choose in this country because

"the speed of the offense is ahead of the speed of the defense."

He predicted a war between the United States and Russia would be "primarily an air war in the beginning." It would, he said, entail exchange of atomic-bomb attacks rather than a slugging match between foot soldiers. He said America should prepare for this type of war.

But Sen. Knowland, Republican, California, and Martin, Republican Pennsylvania, who also appeared on the program, disagreed with him. They said any members. Also he will report the progress of the year, and the establishing of 10 chapels that will later be organized into churches.

Special attention will be given work sponsored by the Atlanta Association of Presbyterian Laymen, now engaged in raising a $250,000 fund for building and sustaining work in the bounds of the Atlanta Presbytery. This fund is to be followed by a fund of approximately $750,000 for use in the Atlanta Presbytery and throughout the State.

At the Synod meeting Leroy Burney, of Atlanta, will speak of the Program of Progress. Walter Jones, of Dalton, will give an address on "The Position of the Elder in the Church" at the Laymen's Supper. Dr. Vernon S. Broyles, Executive Secretary of Church Extension, will speak of the new organizational setup of Southern Presbyterian Assembly, with new headquarters to be in Atlanta.

Other speakers will be Dr. W. B. Ward, of Spartanburg, on "Evangelism;" Dr. G. H. Hudson, Missionary to China, on "World Missions," and Dr. E. R. Layburn, of Atlanta, former Pastor of the Rome First Church, in a devotional address. Dr. W. C. Sistar, Stated

Yugoslavia Loyalty Drive Shelves 20

Soviet Underground Tactics Boomerang

By M. S. HANDLER
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

BELGRADE, Sept. 10.—The Yugoslav government's drive to crush the reconstituted Soviet underground has already resulted in the suspension or dismissal of 15 to 20 important members of the Communist Party who held high posts in the Peoples Republic of Croatia and the army, it was learned Sunday.

In addition to Dusan Brkic, Vice Premier of Croatia and a member of the central committee, and Rade Zigich, President of processing industries and candidate for membership in the central committee, who were reported Saturday to have been suspended from their functions, it now appears that a third minister in the Croatian cabinet has also fallen into disgrace. He was identified as Stanko Opacic, Minister of Forestry.

According to information available Sunday, a court of inquiry was held last week in Zagreb, capital of Croatia, to examine charges against the suspects. Two members of the Yugoslav Politburo were said to have participated in the proceedings. The court was reported to have established that there was basis for suspicion that the defendants, who held important posts in the party and government, sympathized with the Soviet government against the Yugoslav leaders. It appears, however, that only one of the defendants, Zigich, maintained relations with the Russians. The others presumably only followed Zigich's line.

There is no evidence that discovery of this group indicates that a new internal security problem has arisen in Yugoslavia or that the government is particularly worried. It cannot be said that the government was caught by surprise.

Wyandotte Wage Jump Ends Strike

DETROIT, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The first break in a series of strikes that have cut sharply into the output of war-vital chemicals throughout the nation was reported here Sunday night.

The employees of Wyandotte Chemical Corporation voted overwhelmingly to accept a wage settlement that previously had been thrown out by officials of District 50 of United Mine Workers. The vote was announced as 1,336 for acceptance and 94 against. The settlement provides an immediate 10-cent wage hike.

The company announced that the first of its 2,500 employees began a return to work Sunday night. It has three plants in suburban Wyandotte.

The plants produce soda ash, caustic soda and chlorine. The chemicals are used for key war materials.

The shutdown at Wyandotte and other major chemical plants had cut off 65 per cent of the output of soda ash, industry sources said.

The new contract at Wyandotte provides a five-cent an-hour cost-of-living increase and also a five-cent-an-hour basic wage increase effective immediately. It calls for another five-cent an hour raise in January, 1952. The contract runs to January, 1953.

The immediate 10-cent raise boosts the average wage to $1.75 an hour.

An unauthorized strike shut down the Wyandotte plants last Tuesday.

It increased to seven the number of basic chemicals producing units on strike throughout the nation. Three other plants have been out since June 12. Another has been out since July 22. The strikes by members of John L. Lewis District 50 of the UMW.

out his signature—should Congress remain in session.

If Mr. Truman should veto it under such circumstances Congress would then have the opportunity to override by two-thirds vote of each House.

But should Congress adjourn before the 10 days were up, Mr. Truman could veto by doing nothing—keeping it in his pocket. This is what the bill's backers wish to avoid and what may force a prolongation of the session—despite the wish to get home for election campaigning.

Mr. Truman believes the anti-Communist feature of the bill is unconstitutional and Un-American, that it would be extremely difficult of enforcement and would simply send Communists and their sympathizers underground. However, it appears that at least two-thirds of each House disagree.

The House returns Monday after its long "Labor Day holiday." It will have before it the $4,508,000,000 first installment tax increase bill.

It is expected that the House will send this measure to conference, although there may be efforts to add an excess profits tax. Mr. Truman has asked this type of tax be provided in the second installment, which will not come until next year.

Should the bill be quickly sent to conference an agreement and final enactment seems likely before the end of the week.

Mattress Blaze

C. J. Faulkner, 38, of 333 Luckie St., N. W., will face trial at 2 p. m. Monday on charges of disorderly conduct-malicious mischief in connection with a mattress fire in the Salvation Army Hotel early Sunday. Police quoted Faulkner as saying he went to sleep with a cigarette in his hand. Damage was confined to Faulkner's room, they said.

Fire in Office

A quick-spreading blaze Sunday swept through the office of the C. P. Coker Roofing Company, 269 Whiteford Ave., N. E., causing considerable damage. Pts. R. S. Strubling and J. H. Parham said the front section of the building was destroyed.

Storm Seen For N. C. Coast

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Storm warnings went up on the North Carolina and Virginia coasts Sunday in the path of a small hurricane moving northward in the Atlantic.

Warnings were ordered up from Cape Henry, Va., to Morehead City, N. C., and the Weather Bureau advised small craft in the area not to venture into open water.

The hurricane, with winds estimated at about 100 miles per hour, was located about 280 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N. C.

A second hurricane was reported about 1,000 miles east of Puerto Rico and 2,200 miles southeast of the Florida coast. It had winds of 70 to 80 miles per hour. It is moving slowly west or northwest.

the enemy still was capable of launching an attack by two divisions from Taegu from the north. Front dispatches said the Red 1st and 13th Divisions are on the line. The Red 3rd Division is directly west of Taegu, and the 10th is southwest, mostly on the east bank of the Nakdong River near Hyongpung, 13 miles southwest of Taegu.

United Press correspondent Peter Kalischer, reporting from Taegu, gave this summary of the northern front today:

Patrols of the 1st South Korean Division, immediately east of the U. S. 1st Cavalry, moved forward with little of an opposition.

The 8th South Korean Division drove to a point three miles north and east of Yongchon and the advance continued. (North Korean Army communiqué today claimed the capture of Yongchon.)

At the extreme eastern end of the line, the 3rd South Korean Division checked a continuing attack being made against its lines three miles southwest of Pohang. A spokesman said the Pohang air field still is in United Nations' hands.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in a release issued in the early hours of Monday morning that United Nations troops were advancing in the two other key areas of the critical northern front against light or disorganized enemy resistance.

"In the extreme northeast sector of the United Nations' perimeter, elements of the Republic of Korea 3rd Division were reported advancing against light enemy resistance," MacArthur said.

"... United Nations' forces in the Yongchon area (in the center of the northern front) continued to advance against disorganized enemy resistance."

MacArthur issued his release at the unusual hour of 3:10 a. m. (3:10 p. m. EST Sunday) after United Nations' leaders had said that the Communist offensive on the northern front had been stopped, if only for the moment, and that their troops were ready to smash any new drive which the enemy might make.

The South Korean 8th Division scored a big success in the Yongchon sector, which is the key to the entire central part of the northern front.

Front dispatches and official statements said that the South Koreans have savagely savaged the enemy lines for big gains and that some enemy troops dropped their weapons and ran.

A spokesman for MacArthur said at Sunday's briefing that the UN forces had established a firm, cohesive line on the entire northern front for the first time—all the way from Taegu to the east coast.

There has been no word from the 28-year-old beauty, Mrs. Robert Wallach, since she walked through the swinging doors of Tempelhof Airport here Aug. 26, the fourth member of the Field family to disappear behind the Iron Curtain.

Mrs. Wallach, whose maiden name was Erica Glaser, hinted to friends that she was coming to Berlin to try to trace her foster father. Friends said some of her contacts were among the 10 prominent Communists purged in East Germany recently.

When she failed to telephone her husband in Paris, confirming her safe arrival, he asked U. S. authorities to investigate. They found no trace of her. Friends who expected her heard nothing.

In May, 1949, Field left Switzerland for Prague and has not been heard from since. His brother, Hermann, and his wife, Hertha, also vanished when they went from England to Prague and to Warsaw to trace him.

In August, 1949, Hermann booked passage on a plane from Warsaw to Prague, but when the plane arrived he was not aboard. Mrs. Noel Field disappeared after reporting Hermann missing.

A PAIR OF QUEENS—MRS. AND MISS AMERICA
Mrs. Betty McAllister, left, and Miss Yolande Betze

Pennsylvania Blonde Named Mrs. America

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 10.—(UP)—Honey-haired Mrs. Betty Eileen McAllister, of Johnstown, Pa., whose husband said "she's hardly been out of the house since we got married," Sunday won the 1950 Mrs. America contest and grab-bag of prizes that will include a nationwide tour.

The 25-year-old housewife said she had never before entered a beauty contest and added that her husband had "pushed me into this one. A thing like this," she said, "makes me feel as dizzy as the day I got married."

The curvaceous mother of a five-year-old girl and a three-year-old boy, defeated runnerups Mrs. Irma Hamilton, 23, of Miami Beach, Fla., and Mrs. June Byers, 25, of Cleveland, Ohio, along with 28 other finalists for the title of America's most delectable ball and chain.

Measurements which won for Mrs. McAllister were: 34½-inch bust, 24-inch waist and 35-inch hips. She is five feet, three inches tall and weighs 113 pounds. Her other major qualification as mentioned by her husband is "the inability to pick a quarrel."

They have been married six and one-half years.

Beyond her bathing suit charms, Mrs. McAllister impressed the judges by finishing first in a preliminary cooking contest and taking second place in a crocheting event.

In a preliminary survey before the final elimination she lined up with three-fourths of the contestants in denouncing pajamas as sure poison to married romance and plumped for the old-fashioned nightgown as being as important as her good looks in keeping her husband.

"I want my husband to wear the pants all the time," she said. She was second by Michigan's entry, Mrs. Loretta Hanson, of Detroit, who said: "I went for pajamas in the second or third year of my married life but I cut it out when my husband started to turn bookworm."

Educators Plan Regional Centers For Higher Learning in South

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Sept. 10.—Specific plans for both the immediate implementation and the long-range guidance that would enable the South to expand and improve its graduate training facilities on a regional basis were reported Sunday at the final session of an Interstate Educational Conference.

The presidents and deans of 31 Southern colleges and universities moved unanimously to initiate the necessary collaboration of political and educational leadership that would strengthen the region as a scientific research area for the Nation's mobilization efforts and at the same time provide the basis for full realization of its human and material resources in the future.

The action came in the form of a voice vote acceptance of six workshop reports that had been formulated in a week-long conference of 200 faculty members and several national consultants who studied the feasibility of pooling the South's educational investments to create regional centers of higher education.

The joint recommendations of the educators will be submitted to the Board of Control of the Southern Regional Education Program for broader action at its joint meeting with the Southern Governors Conference in November.

The governors and certain designated educators are joint members of the Board of Control with equal voting power, but the annual sessions in connection with the Southern Governors Conference provide a means for channeling the educational blueprints into State legislative action at the political level.

As regards immediate implementation the educators reported that within three to six months there could be regional collaboration in the use of distinctive service for graduate study and research. As examples of the fields of study already available, they cited plant introduction, statistics, meteorology, speech correction, marine sciences and public administration.

They also pointed out that immediate action could be taken in the use of research facilities of public and private agencies as supplements to graduate training. The Tennessee Valley Authority and the Air University at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., have agreed to make their facilities available on a systematic basis, they reported.

It was also recommended that the South move rapidly to facilitate the awarding of government and industrial research contracts to Southern institutions. Based on experience in the last war, it was stated, the South could anticipate loss of trained personnel to other regions unless more research opportunities were available.

To accomplish this end, it was reported, there should be established an office of research relations to assess the technical facilities of Southern institutions and the needs of government and industrial agencies. An advisory commission made up of nationally known specialists in various fields would "present the South's case to the Nation."

Other reports dealt with principles of guidance and procedure for Southern schools to evaluate themselves in appropriate graduate fields of study and to determine the "right relationship" of graduate centers to the basic and associated disciplines.

The conference concluded its sessions with Gov. Gordon Browning, of Tenn., delivering the principal address in which he called upon the South to support the regional education program as a method for effectively spending educational funds and not as a means to achieve certain economies.

He also urged the South to

Early Korea Victory No Longer Predicted 'Dunkerque' Danger Fades As Red Mass Drives Fail

By RUSSELL BRINES

TOKYO, Monday Sept. 11.—(AP)—Nobody talks anymore of an American "Dunkerque" in Korea, but predictions of early victory also are hard to find.

Between these extremes there is ample room for alternate waves of optimism and pessimism which wash recurrently over the GIs fighting the war and the officers directing it.

These tides reach as far as Tokyo, a city remarkably sensitive to frontline sentiment. As might be expected, they rise and fall in direct relation to the day's fighting.

Right now a brief period of optimism has returned. Allied Forces have stopped the Reds' largest offensive, the 50,000-man attack on the southwestern front toward Pusan which began Sept. 1.

Other counter-attacking Allied Forces succeeded Saturday in closing a gap torn in the northeastern defense wall by a Communist breakthrough toward Yongchon, gateway to Taegu.

The first success demonstrated the United Nations' ability to meet head-on massed Communist power. The second showed swift "fire brigade" mobility to seal off a sharp puncture.

The last time this was done, Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the U. S. Eighth Army, had to warn his officers against over-optimism. That was a little over two weeks ago when a powerful Red smash toward Taegu, down the Kumhwa "bowling alley" from the north, was hurled back.

American forces are now fighting bitterly against another Red threat in the same "bowling alley." This time the Communists have punched to the last row of ridges above the plains leading to Taegu, seven miles north of that city.

Officers in Tokyo, surveying the whole scene, agree that the Allied beachhead is not yet out of danger. They say the Reds have the potentiality of massing a 130,000-man assault around the entire perimeter.

The turning point of the war, they add, will not be reached until United Nations forces can seize the initiative and keep the Communists on the defensive. This stage is still distant.

Sometimes official statements don't seem to square with this white-black aspect of the frontlines. Most noticeable, perhaps, have been the varied comments of Gen. Walker himself.

In late July, when nobody really knew what would happen, Walker told his officers they must not yield another inch of ground and must be prepared to "stand or die."

It now is clear that Walker was talking largely for effect on the enemy. His speech, blared throughout the world, helped camouflage the fact that his troops at that same moment were making their dangerous and highly successful withdrawal to the present line.

A month ago some of the shocked, battered men who went through the early hopeless days of the campaign were still wondering about being driven into the sea. Walker pointedly mentioned there would be no "Dunkerque."

General opinion is that the Allies are in Korea to stay, even though they might have to give up more bloody ground. Even the pessimists seem to believe that.

NOT THAT "WILD BLUE"—Sgt. Edward L. Puckett, of Alpharetta, sports an outfit of new Air Force "blues" for the approval of Ann Gilbert, of 818 First St., Marietta. The uniforms, which will be issued Thursday to men at Dobbins Air Force Base, have silver buttons and lapel ornaments, black shoes, light blue poplin shirts, and dark blue ties.

Tift's Owens, Ex-FBI Man, To Sleuth for Gains

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles dealing with newly-nominated members of the Georgia General Assembly.)

Tift County's newly-nominated representative is a former special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

But now Atty. Seymour S. Owens, of Tifton, plans to do his "sleuthing" in the General Assembly, searching out funds to finance the Minimum Foundation Program for Education and expansion of the services rendered by the State Welfare Department.

Owens declared that he also will seek complete tax revision and improving both the State's highways and its program for national defense.

The youthful lawmaker was born June 30, 1916, at Royston and attended Royston public schools. He graduated from Young Harris College in 1935 and took pre-law at Piedmont College. Receiving his LL.B. degree at Lamar Law School, Emory University, Owens was a special agent of the FBI in 1940.

During World War II, he served overseas with U. S. Intelligence and returned to the FBI after being mustered out. Owens left the government service to practice law in Tifton in 1947.

UN Unit Faces Vote On Bombing Charge

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

LAKE SUCCESS, Sept. 10.—The United Nations' 11-member Security Council faces a critical vote Monday on whether or not to invite the Chinese Communists to sit in on debate of their charges that American planes violated Manchurian territory.

United Nations observers here say there is small chance that the Chinese Communists will be invited, and get even this backdoor entrance to the Council's meetings.

The session, scheduled for 3 p. m., has evoked unusual interest here, however, because the Council, for the first time, last Thursday gave the Soviet Union a minor tactical victory when it decided to take up the Chinese Communist invitation issue before opening debate on the Manchuria bombing complaint.

There was no surprise when the five states that have recognized Peiping—Britain, India, Norway, Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union—voted to put the invitation issue first on the agenda for Monday. Both France and Egypt, however, also voted in favor of this action, while the United States abstained.

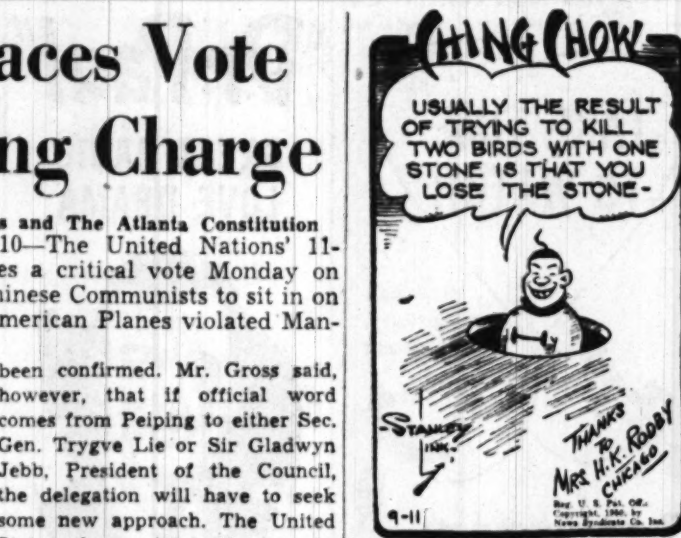

United Nations observers, however, take the view that their vote was merely a "logical" move to dispose of the invitation request before opening full-scale debate on the complaint. The United States and other delegations have maintained the actual invitation bid will not muster the seven votes necessary for Council approval.

The United States will vote against seating the Peiping representatives, but Ernest K. Gross, deputy delegate, has emphasized that this will not be a veto.

Mr. Gross has conceded, if radio reports from Peiping are true, the United States may have to scrap its present proposal that the Council appoint India and Sweden to a fact-finding board to investigate the bombing charges.

On Friday, the official Peiping radio broadcast notice that the government would bar entry to the United Nations fact-finding commission as a protest to the Council's refusal to give the Chinese Communists a hearing on this issue.

So far, these reports have not ings could be investigated and confirmed by an impartial fact-finding board, the United States was prepared to pay indemnities.

Weeklies Eligible for Pulitzer Prize

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)—

The nation's 9,794 weekly newspapers will be invited this year for the first time to submit nominations for awards of Pulitzer Prizes in journalism.

Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia University School of Journalism announced the innovation Sunday. He is secretary of the advisory board on Pulitzer Prizes, which makes recommendations to the University trustees.

He said the change applies in all seven of the journalism categories—public service, local reporting, national reporting, international reporting, editorial writing, cartoons and news photography.

The journalism prizes, first awarded in 1917, have been offered for work appearing in dailies in the past. The awards usually are made on the first Monday in May by the Columbia trustees.

Second Typhoon Threatens Japan

TOKYO, Sept. 10.—(AP)—A typhoon, the second in a week, is sweeping in from the southeast towards Japan.

It is expected to strike the main Japanese island of Honshu Tuesday or Wednesday.

The central typhoon forecast section of the 2143 Air Weather Wing reported Sunday the typhoon was 370 miles due south of Tokyo, moving slightly north of northwest. Its internal velocity was estimated at more than 103 miles per hour.

Fair Sets Horse Show With Amateurs as Stars

A horse show in which the amateur rider takes top billing!

Usually the limelight falls on the professional equestrian, with the unsung amateurs occupying lesser positions on the show's program. But at Lakewood Park, Oct. 2-5, the nonprofessionals are going to get their chance.

More than 200 entrants from throughout the nation are expected to converge on Atlanta to participate in the highly unique horse show, to be held in conjunction with the Southeastern Fair-A-Ganza.

The Elks Clubs of Greater Atlanta are sponsoring the event for the benefit of the Elks Aidmore Hospital for Crippled Children.

The horse show is to become a permanent part of the fair activities. Prize money totaling $6,000 will go to the owners of horses ridden by amateur riders, according to John L. Bowers, of Winston-Salem, N. C., manager of the horse show. Additional stakes, totaling $1,500, will be awarded in the limited number of professional events.

Amateurs cannot enter professional stakes, or vice versa, he emphasized. A ring committee will have final voice in passing on the amateur status of any exhibitor.

Bowers said that 200 portable stables have been imported to Atlanta and are to be erected at Lakewood this week. The showings will be held in a specially constructed ring, fronting the main grandstand at the park.

Young Harris Offers Handicap Scholarships

Recall Songs of '33

By PAUL JONES

Gordon MacRae and Lucille Norman will sing the top songs of 1933 on "The Railroad Hour" at 8 p. m. on WSB-NBC. The opening solo, starring MacRae, is Irving Berlin's "Easter Parade" followed by Miss Norman singing "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" from Jerome Kern's famous operetta "Roberta."

The two stars then blend voices in a duet, "Temptation," "My Moonlight Madonna," MacRae's second solo, followed by Miss Norman in "Don't Blame Me." The closing number features the two stars in "Touch of Your Hand" by Kern.

BIDU SAYAGO, Met soprano, will be heard in a romantic selection, "Plaisir d'Amour," and the air "Selva opaca" from Rossini's opera, "William Tell," when she appears in the featured guest spot on the WSB-NBC "Telephone Hour" at 9 p. m.

The orchestra will present the prelude to Act III of Wagner's "Lohengrin."

PAUL LAYALLE and the WSB-NBC "Band of America" present "Back to School" program at 9:30 p. m.

"Chop Sticks," in elaborate arrangement, recalls that as children return to school, many of them will be resuming their piano lessons, typified in this simplest of all piano items.

GARLUND DAVE GARROWAY and his clan of happy people are back on the five-a-week schedule on WSB-NBC with a new title, "Dial Dave Garroway" daily at 1:15 p. m.

Cast includes sultry songstress Connie Russell, handsome baritone Jack Haskell and the Art Van Damme instrumental quintet.

"LIGHTS OUT," that supernatural thriller, returns to WSB-TV at 9 p. m. as a regular weekly feature, with Ella Raines starring in the first presentation of "Ideas of April."

Miss Raines will be seen as a female detective whose death, and that of her young son, are foretold by a fortune teller.

The fortune teller's uncanny predictions unnerve all the detectives assigned to investigate her.

Others in the cast include George Reeves and Horace McMahon.

LOCAL VIEWERS have a "Blind Date" with gorgeous Arlene Francis as this amusing boy-meets-girl program returns to WSB-TV at 8:30 p. m.

Boys on the show match wits and telephone-date techniques in an attempt to win the lovely members of the opposite sex—New York's most beautiful models.

RICHS DWIGHT HORTON and schoolmate Smith will meet incumbent "Chafate Parade" champions, Randy Fort and Brad Ansley on the WSB-TV program at 8 p. m. Lee Jordan is charade moderator.

W. German Rearmament Action Seen

Serious Dissent Held Unlikely

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(AP)—A powerful segment of Congress appeared ready Sunday to back up any decision by the Atlantic powers to reararm Western Germany against possible Russian aggression.

American policy, worked out in advance of this week's Western World defense talks in New York City, is reported to favor German military units as part of a great international force to defend Europe.

Individual Democratic and Republican senators said in separate interviews they favor giving Western Germans the military equipment and the training necessary to weld them into a defense force.

There appeared to be no serious dissent from this attitude among leaders of both parties, although Senator Lodge, Republican, Massachusetts, said formation of a European defense force must precede any action on the German question.

Lodge's colleague on the American United Nations delegation, Senator Sparkman, Democrat, Alabama, told reporters he favors giving the Germans in the American, British and French zones sufficient weapons to offset the trained legions the Russians have established in East Germany.

"If the Western Germans are going to provide an effective barrier against possible aggression, they have to be capable of self-defense," Sparkman said.

Senator Hill, Democrat, Alabama, said he thinks Western Germany should be tied in militarily and economically with the free nations of the world.

Senator Kerr, Democrat, Oklahoma, said he sees no way to develop defense power in Western Europe that can be depended upon to contain Russia "without an appropriate German participation."

"In the final analysis, Russia can never win this struggle unless and until she both overruns and assimilates Western Europe," he said. "It is therefore the area of decision in this phase of the struggle."

"Germany cannot survive under Russian control and assimilation and Germany knows this. Western Europe as such cannot stand up to Russia without German participation and cooperation."

Retailing, Selling Courses Offered

Efficiency courses for employees in the retailing and selling fields will be offered at Smith-Hughes Vocational Evening School beginning Sept. 18.

Offered through the Department of Distributive Education, the training is open to any employed or temporarily unemployed person. Classes will be held from 7 to 9 p. m.

F. W. Dill, 1864 Wilford, East St. Louis, Ill., says he's the happiest man in Illinois, now that he's feeling better. Mr. Dill gives all the credit to HADACOL for feeling so much better. He was suffering from deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron.

Here is Mr. Dill's statement on what HADACOL did for him: "I was a conductor for the New York Central Railroad for over 27 years. In 1947 a locomotive ran over me. I was in the hospital a year and a half. After I got out of the hospital I was very nervous and had dizzy spells all the time. I tried many things—nothing seemed to help me. Then a friend of mine persuaded me to take HADACOL—and after he insisted for 2 weeks I finally got some HADACOL. What a marvelous change has taken place—now I am able to move around, am hardly nervous at all and dizzy and fainting spells, why, they've almost completely vanished. Now I feel so good I have opened up a candy store and do a good day's work. HADACOL—why, that's the most wonderful thing there is in this world. I recommend it to all my friends."

Many Thousands are benefiting from HADACOL... even hundreds of doctors are recommending HADACOL to their patients whose systems lack Vitamins B1, B2, Iron, and Niacin. HADACOL is so wonderful because HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these precious Vitamins and Minerals to every organ, and every part of your body—in the heart, liver, kidneys and lungs, even to the eyes, hair and nails.

Don't continue to be miserable! Don't continue to suffer. Give remarkable HADACOL a chance to help you and if you don't feel better with the first few bottles you take—you get your money back. Only $1.25 for Trial Size. Large Family or Hospital Size, $3.50. (c) 1950, The LeBlanc Corporation.

Red Marchers Attack West German Police

68 Communist Demonstrators Jailed After Stones, Fists Fly in 3 Cities

BERLIN, Sept. 10—(AP)—Communist demonstrators observed German Memorial Day Sunday by clashing with police in three West German cities. The police arrested 68 of the demonstrators and cracked a few heads.

The Communists, mostly blue-shirted youngsters, attacked the police with stones and fists in Berlin, Frankfurt and Darmstadt. Ten Communists were arrested in Frankfurt, 37 in Berlin and 21 in Darmstadt. Twenty-seven of the Berliners were released after only short detention. In other German cities observance of the day went off quietly.

The Communists claimed one of their young women demonstrators was taken to a hospital here with head lacerations, though injuries generally were minor.

In Berlin, rival memorial ceremonies were held honoring the victims of Nazi concentration camps. Allied West Berlin celebrated quietly. Joined by the commandants of the Western occupation powers, West Germans laid wreaths and heard speeches.

But about 600 young Communists started to march from their West Berlin homes to an "international memorial and peace demonstration" in the Russian sector. They defied a police order to break up their unauthorized march. No parades are permitted in West Berlin unless the city government has given a permit. When police tried to enforce the order, the marchers began throwing stones. The police called up reinforcements, retaliated with clubs and scattered the demonstrators.

EX-BUDDHIST BELIEVES

Indo-Chinese Turning To Christian Religion

By ED KELLY

A former Buddhist believes Buddhism is on the wane in Indo-China "because of progress being made by Christianity."

Tran-Ngoc-Te, now a Seventh Day Adventist from Saigon, in southern Indo-China, hinted here that this is important from a political standpoint because converted people now place more value to human life than originally.

"Christianity has raised the standard of living in our country," he related. "and has made my people dislike political affairs because they have realized the trouble and selfishness involved."

Tran said much progress has been made teaching his countrymen how to build better homes, how to dress (many, he said, never wore clothes) and steps in improving the language and creating an alphabet.

"More important," he pointed out, "they are learning how to appreciate these finer things."

Tran listed two reasons why the Indo-Chinese find Christianity more attractive than Buddhism:

"First," he said, "Christianity promises eternal life; Buddhism promises no more than a life of misery. Secondly, through Christianity one can get rid of his sins; Buddhists can not be delivered from sin."

A former worshiper of idols and images, Tran said more progress is made among younger Buddhists, since older people tend to be too skeptical of a new faith.

The convert is in Atlanta visiting the Rev. R. H. Wentland, Home Missionary Secretary of the Southern Union Conference of the Seventh Day Adventists.

Wentland met Tran in 1929 when he went to Indo-China as the first missionary to that country from his church. He learned the language from Tran and later converted the Buddha worshiper. Tran is editor of "Signs of the Times," a religious magazine published in Saigon.

The painters Van Gogh, Cezanne, El Greco, Blake, Montecelli, Carlo Dolci, Magnoni, Lautrec and Mancini all went mad.

Lt. Heard Favors Horse, Horse Sense

Police methods and techniques undoubtedly have improved with the advent of scientific aids such as radio cars and crime laboratories, but horse and horse sense are still two standbys with one policeman.

Lt. Carl Heard, Sr., 64, senior member of the Fulton County Police Department, has just observed his fortieth anniversary as a Fulton officer—and he doesn't think anything will ever outmode those two old-fashioned adjuncts to policing.

"When I came to work with the department in 1910, I rode a fine black horse named Fisher," the veteran officer recalled. "I wouldn't give up the radio car we used today—but I don't believe I could give up my black horse. Traveler, either. I ride him nearly every afternoon and on week-ends."

"And horse sense is something a policeman will need—no matter what modern science thinks of next. In my day a man didn't have to have many qualifications to get on the force. The requirements are getting stricter all the time, and I think the time will come when all of our policemen will be college graduates."

"That's a good thing, too. A man, especially a policeman, needs as good an education as he can get."

Lt. Heard had three brothers in police work, two of them killed in line of duty. He was wounded

YOU Wouldn't Hurt Her... Would You?

Sept. 11, 1950
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Driver:

Today my daughter, who is seven years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue socks. Her cocker-spaniel, whose name is "Scout," sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education as she waved "goodby" and started off to the halls of learning.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about her teacher, who has eyes in the back of her head, and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things. Then we studied reading and arithmetic, and then to bed. She's back there now, in the nursery, sound asleep, with "Princess Elizabeth," (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm.

You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see, I'm her daddy. But I can't be with her all the time. I have to work to pay for her clothes and her education. When her doll's finger is cut, or a leg is broken, I can fix it. But when she starts to school, when she crosses the street well—then she is in your hands. So, won't you please look out for her and the other children? Please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and please remember that children do run from behind parked cars.

Please don't run over my little girl. Thank you.

"ANOTHER SAFE DRIVER."

Sam Snead Takes Reading Golf Title

By HERB ALTSCHUL

READING, Pa., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Sammy Snead sloshed through the rain and mud with his fourth straight sub-par round Sunday to grab top money in the $15,000 Reading Open golf tournament with a record-smashing 268, 20 under par for the Berkshire Country Club course.

Snead, playing his finest golf since May, won by eight strokes over his closest competitor, Jim Ferrier, of San Francisco, who came home with 274 to take second money by a stroke from Glenn Teal, of Jacksonville, Fla.

The White Sulphur Springs, Va., hotshot shattered the competitive course record by one stroke. Ben Hogan held the old mark of 269 set in 1948.

Snead had to battle some tough weather conditions to finish with a two-under-par 70 Sunday and hoist his earnings for the year to $31,992. It was Snead's first tournament victory since May 1948. Ferrier was in contention through the sixth hole at which time he had edged to within two strokes of Snead. But the big Australian faltered after that and had to settle for a par 72. At that, he barely edged out Teal, who finished fast with a 70.

Ted Kroll, unattached golfer from New Hartford, N. Y., and the leader at the 18 and 36-hole mark, skyrocketed over par for the second straight day, finishing with a 74 that gave him a 75-hole total of 282 and a share in tenth place.

Cary Middlecott, of Ormond Beach, Fla., winner of the $15,000 tournament last year, wound up in a tie for seventeenth.

Ralph Blomquist, of Glendale, Calif., turned in a 71 for 278 and fourth place. Jim Turnesa, of Briarcliff, N. Y., finishing with a blistering 66—the day's lowest score—bounced into a fifth-place tie with Chuck Klein, of San Antonio, Texas, each with 279.

Johnny Palmer, Ennis, N. C., and Lloyd Mangrum, Niles, Ill., tied for seventh at 280 and Fred Haas, Jr., Claremont, Calif., wound up all alone at 281 for ninth place.

Plans Begun For Rite Game

Plans were launched for the annual Georgia-Georgia Tech freshman football game Sunday at the "Kickoff Dinner" given by the Football Committee of the Scottish Rite Hospital.

Scottish Rite chapters, Georgia and Georgia Tech coaches, newspaper and radio men gathered at Harry Carr's estate for the first move toward the 1950 classic.

Tom Law, one of the original directors of the game at its inception 18 years ago, was master of ceremonies.

Guests stood for a moment in silent tribute to the late W. A. Alexander of Tech, whose idea started the charity affair.

The Hospital derives from 65 to 70 percent of its support from the game. More than 11,000 crippled children, unable to pay for orthopedic care, have been treated at the hospital during the last 27 years.

SALERNO, BILYEU SPARKLE

Topsy-Turvy Start For Bulldog Squad

By GENE ASHER

ATHENS, Sept. 10.—To Georgia football coaches, the first 10 days of fall practice must long be remembered as ones in which nothing seemed too incredible to happen and most anything did.

It started amid brilliant sunshine, was followed by rain and unusually cold weather, and closed with a normal fall atmosphere.

Drills were held at 6:30 a. m. An afternoon scrimmage lasted two hours and 10 minutes. And the Bulldogs' spirit progressed with each practice.

Two sophomores, Fullback Fred Bilyeu, of Cookeville, Tenn., and Guard Frank Salerno, of Chicago, Ill., put in strong bids for first-string positions.

Halfback Chuck Maroni, who missed two seasons with a broken neck and a broken leg, displayed his recuperative power with a 79-yard jaunt in which he drove over three tacklers.

Zippy Morocco, Youngstown, halfback, who for two years was overshadowed, has developed into the team's most elusive runner. And he once displayed downfield blocking ability, flattening the sure tacklers to permit a touchdown.

But Patsy Rocco, Art DeCarlo and Luke Brunson, besides Salerno and Bilyeu, have most impressed Head Coach Wallace Butts. "De Carlo and Salerno have shown considerable improvement," Butts said. "And Bilyeu, Brunson and Rocco have been our most consistent backs."

Bilyeu—an excellent passer—Brunson and Rocco have been big ground-gainers, with the latter starting on defense as well.

"The squad has shown good spirit," Butts added, "but we have a long way to travel before the Maryland opener."

Coaches Sterling Dupree, Bill Hartman, Quinton Lumpkin and Jim Whitley all agree that the team's spirit has been magnificent.

Commenting on the line, Jordan said, "The line is improving. The bad weather has hurt us, but I feel confident we will be ready for the opener." Jordan praised Salerno, Mo-

Clipper's Blows Aid 8-1 Victory

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Joe DiMaggio and the weather washed out the Washington Senators Sunday. DiMaggio belted three home runs in the first game of a double-header as New York won 8-1, while rain ended the nightcap after 3½ innings with New York trailing, 6-2.

DiMaggio became the first player ever to hit three homers in one game at Griffith Stadium.

The postponement of the nightcap forced the rescheduling of a double-header Monday, starting at noon to permit the teams to catch evening trains for the West.

DiMaggio socked circuit blasts off left Sid Hudson in the second and sixth innings and then completed his big day with a two-run wallop off Relief Mickey Harris in the ninth. The Yankee Clipper's four RBIs raised his total to 101, making the ninth time in his career that he has driven in more than 100 runs in one season.

The victory in the opener, and the called-off nightcap enabled the Yankees to gain half a game on the league-leading Detroit Tigers and maintain their slight edge on the third-place Boston Red Sox. Detroit split with Chicago and the Sox took their finale from Philadelphia in Boston.

All three of DiMaggio's blows—he has 27 for the year—zoomed into the distant left-field bleachers. Each one traveled at least 410 feet on the fly.

Vic Raschi received credit for the victory, his nineteenth, who hurled the final two innings.

DON NEWCOMBE TAKES LOSS

Giant Homers Beat Bums, 6-4; Larry Jansen Gains 16th Win

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Home runs by Monte Irvin, Bob Thomson and Wes Westrum paced the New York Giants to a 6-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers today. Larry Jansen went the distance to rack up his sixteenth victory. Jansen allowed seven hits, including home runs by Bobby Morgan and Gil Hodges.

A crowd of 27,692, saw the Giants lace into Don Newcombe from the very start. The big Negro right-hander, in his first outing since starting both games of a double-header against the Phillies last Wednesday, gave Leo Durocher's boys all of their six runs and six of their eight hits in the four innings he pitched. He was lifted for a pinch-hitter and was charged with his ninth defeat.

Among the hits allowed by Newcombe the homers by Irvin, Westrum and Thomson. The latter two came with none on base, but Irvin's was delivered with one on after the Giants had already scored once in the first inning and sent them off to a 3-0 lead.

SALOME—HOW HE PASSES

Dallas Date Test For Joe's Pitching

By EDWIN POPE

Stomped-down Joe Salome is pitching himself right into the toughest job of his pass-packed youth.

The Atlanta-reared Syrian has shown such amazing improvement in Georgia Tech drills that he has bulleted into line as the Jacket who must handle the passing load against Southern Methodist ace Fred Benner.

The joker—and it's probably not so funny to quiet Joseph—is that Salome has only completed one pass in his varsity game career. And that one, against South Carolina last year, lost four yards.

Salome is not Tech's starting quarterback, although he has a chance to become it. Darrell Crawford, for his ball-handling adeptness and quick-witted signal-calling, is the regular quarterback.

But Little Joe has just about overshadowed his T-slot companion in the flipping division. You never heard of Benner?

He is the Mustang passing attack what Kvie Rote is to the running game. When Gil Johnson decided in the Summer of 1949 to turn pro and not take his final college year, Benner popped up as an unqualified but probable successor.

Deak Walker was a better passer, and Benner had played only one year in high school and none as a freshman. So Flamingo Fred sidelined it through the Wake Forest and Missouri games. When the Deaker was injured against Rice, they tossed Benner to the Owls. He tossed the Mustangs to victory, completing nine passes in eight minutes.

He whipped six good throws in nine tries as the Ponies clipped Kentucky, and threw the touchdown pass preceding Walker's winning (7-6) placement against Texas. Single scoring air excursions against Arkansas, Baylor and Texas Christian brought Benner to full bloom.

His soph record showed 47 completions in 85 attempts for six touchdowns and 406 yards.

Joe, however, is used to fighting his way out of tough spots. As the Marist bellwether in 1946, he made all-city and all-State. He can run adequately, too.

A shoulder separation kept him out all but about four minutes last year.

"Joe is not a great passer yet," Coach Bobby Dodd says, "and he is not the field general Crawford is. But, the way his throwing is improving, there is no telling what he could do for our passing attack."

The days before Sept. 23, when Tech meets SMU in Dallas, are important ones for Salome.

He'll get plenty of chances to show his stuff in frequent scrimmages, the first one Monday afternoon. The Jackets had a rattling Saturday afternoon but need all possible contact work before the vital Southwestern invasion.

LaMotta, however, considers Detroit his "lucky city" and is confident of victory. The fight will not be broadcast or televised.

In his first defense of his title, LaMotta outpointed another European, Italy's Tiberio Mitri, in a 15-rounder in New York's Madison Square Garden, last July 12.

The Garden, meanwhile, opens its Fall-Winter boxing season Friday night with a middleweight ten-rounder featuring two young sluggers, Paddy Young of New York and Ernie (The Rock) Durando of Bayonne, N. J.

A Water Pistol Isn't Enough

Mr. Truman's speech on Saturday night clarified the Administration's approach to economic mobilization.

In fact, it made clear the fact that the President and his advisers have every intention of fighting the roaring flame of inflation, at least until after the November elections, with a water pistol.

Thoughtful people all over the country are deeply disturbed over the unwillingness of the President and those about him to lay the bare facts on the table and let the public know it is in for a tough period, a period of sacrifice and hard work, in order to preserve our liberties and perhaps our very lives.

Any thought that the Korean conflict could be resolved speedily and with token mobilization long since has been dissipated. Russia somehow is finding ways and means of sending supplies and armament to the Communist invaders. Men are trickling down, or flooding down, from Manchuria, our air supremacy and continual bombing to the contrary notwithstanding.

Moreover, the Chinese Communists remain determined to invade Formosa. Regardless of whether or not Russia believes now is the time for an all-out strike, the situation is such that a hot-headed incident—the release of a single torpedo by a Russian submarine, for instance—could lead to world war.

Estimates of this country's armament needs steadily are going up. The President started out by asking Congress for some $10,000,000,000 additional defense money. More than $16,000,000,000 already has been authorized. Before the year is out it is extremely likely that our armament needs will run to $40,000,000,000 for the current fiscal year, not counting the extra money we will be called upon to supply to our European allies in the hope of enabling them to stem a possible Russian invasion. The total for the year will amount to as much as $50,000,000,000, which is as much as the nation spent in some years of World War II.

The President and the Congress have been reluctant to curtail nondefense spending. The President asked that this be done but he has not pressed his point. The Congress, with elections coming up, has been only too eager to continue political hand-outs in the hope of dividends at the polls in November.

The situation already has produced inflation. Shortages in certain critical materials are developing and will get worse as time goes on and as the Administration gets along with its slow-motion mobilization.

Instead of laying these facts before the people, and informing them of the sacrifices that are necessary, the President—with the ready assent of a politically minded Congress, both Republican and Democratic—has determined upon the coy approach until after November. Wage increases are being encouraged. Prices are going up by leaps. We are not creeping toward inflation. We are galloping toward it full speed with nothing to retard our progress except the credit controls announced last Friday by the Federal Reserve Board, which are inadequate to do the job, and allocation of materials.

It is doubtful that the race can continue two more months until after the elections without serious and permanent damage to the economy.

Mr. Truman's speech sounded good. The disappointment is that he reached the verge of laying down a program—but then backed away.

The time for all-out mobilization was immediately after it became clear the Korean war was something more than an isolated incident. Our state of unpreparedness called for the supreme effort. Instead, the Administration has dragged its feet. Only pressure from the people succeeded in forcing the Congress to authorize economic controls. Now the President, hoping for political benefit in November, declines to use them.

The people are confused and exasperated. They have a right to be.

shipped into Georgia except that he trump up some sanitary or other rules which would make the milk ineligible, or unless he so embroil the procedure in red tape that it would be unprofitable for out-of-state producers to enter the Georgia market.

If Mr. Linder succeeds in his determination, he also will succeed in arousing other states to bar Georgia products by whatever means are available. Georgia peaches, vegetables and other agricultural commodities will suffer from want of markets. Our farm income will drop. All because of the vanity of the commissioner of agriculture.

The Marines Thought It Over

The Marine Corps League has joined the growing chorus demanding the ouster of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, but, significantly, beat down an accompanying resolution asking the resignation of Secretary of State Acheson.

Leading the fight against the Acheson resolution was an ex-Marine from Wisconsin, home state of Senator McCarthy, himself, incidentally, a former Marine.

There was, and is, good reason for the demand that Secretary Johnson get out. Marines, soldiers, sailors and airmen have suffered from the defense secretary's policies which brought the country to the verge of military bankruptcy and which have cost us dearly in Korea in lives of our fighting men.

There can be, on the other hand, little valid criticism of the policies of the Secretary of State. His course has been the only realistic one we could have pursued. His critics are mired down in the politics of the situation.

We are glad the Marines thought the matter over carefully before acting.

Impressed With No Time for Fear

Davenport Steward's book, "No Time for Fear," which goes on sale across the country today, is a credit to the author and the South. The Augusta-born, Atlanta newsmen is, as those of us who have competed with him for stories over the years have known, a first-rate reporter. And the characteristic comprehensiveness which has made him a top-notch reporter of news stories was never better exemplified than in the authentic detail everywhere apparent in "No Time for Fear." The book unmistakably reflects a tremendous job of research. Its jacket says he has been at work on it since 1944 and my only wonder is that he was able to complete it so quickly.

"No Time for Fear" is the story of the Revolutionary War in South Carolina, of the fabulous Francis Marion and his elusive brigade, of Lighthouse Harry Lee, Nathaniel Greene and many another from that historic era. Yet it is also the story of a well-delineated cast of fictional characters as modern literature has produced. Steward has a faculty of bringing alive the people of whom he writes, whether they be from the realm of history or of fancy.

My hope is that "No Time for Fear" will enjoy a sale in keeping with its merit. Too many publishers have become convinced that the only Southern writing which justifies printing is from the Erskine Caldwell-Lillian Smith school. It will be a sad commentary on the state of the American mind if Steward's book doesn't have twice the sale of a current pot-boiler, supposedly based on the Walton County lynchings of a few years back, which is presently enjoying excellent notices in the holler-than-thou Eastern press.

Incidentally, Steward is not one of those sex-for-sales-sake writers who subscribe to the theory that history is made at night.

"What kind of historical novel do you call this?" one of his colleagues demanded indignantly last week. "I'm two-thirds through it and I haven't come across the first bedroom scene!"

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

The Bryan Of the GOP?

WASHINGTON—Finding themselves with no other strong candidate to offer, New York Republicans have persuaded Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to become a candidate for a third term, although he previously had announced his retirement from public office. It evidently did not take a great deal of persuading, however, as Dewey was found ready to acknowledge his willingness to run before the nominating convention met to name his successor.

All of this suggests the thought that the New York Governor, now only 48, is still a long way from political retirement, despite the pledge he made after his defeat for the presidency the second time in 1948. If he is elected to a third term, he no doubt will emerge as a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination again in 1952.

Nothing Binding Politics being what it is, there is nothing binding about the declaration of a public official, however solemnly it may be given, that he intends to retire upon the completion of his term. Time and again incumbents in various offices have announced their retirement and then changed their minds later. It is one of the privileges of politics.

Not all political observers took Governor Dewey any too seriously when he announced, after his defeat by President Truman two years ago, that he was through with active participation in politics. Some were remarked at the time that, instead of retiring, he would probably remain as the Bryan of the Republican Party. William Jennings Bryan was three times the presidential nominee of the Democrats and was a perennial candidate after that. The Republicans may have to contend with Dewey in a similar role for some years to come. Any man who has been bitten by the presidential bee does not give up easily.

Six years ago when Governor Dewey was making his first bid for the presidency as the Republican nominee he was hammering away on the theme: "It's time for a change." He accused the Democrats of setting up Franklin D. Roosevelt, then a candidate for a fourth term, in the role of an indispensable man, and he had been critical of the movement to "draft" Roosevelt four years before that on the premise that war threatened and the President could not decline to serve when other men were being inducted into the service.

Now Dewey is being projected into a similar role of indispensability, and he cloaks his candidacy with the same good soldier attitude as adopted by Roosevelt. In expressing his willingness to run, he said: "Today the people of New York are being asked to make sacrifices for our defense in the face of deadly peril. . . . In good conscience I cannot ask others to serve unless I am equally willing to serve."

Small Chorus Back in June when Dewey first made his definite announcement about not running for re-election there was only a small chorus of voices asking him to reconsider. For the most part these came from hangers-on and jobholders under his administration. Then the Democrats pulled a fast one by announcing that Mayor O'Dwyer, of New York City, would resign his post and go to Mexico City as American ambassador. This meant that a mayoralty election would be held in New York City at the same time as the gubernatorial election this Fall, with the certainty that there would be a great outpouring of preponderantly Democratic votes.

After that considerable pressure was exerted on Dewey to reconsider. The small chorus swelled into a big choir. The Republicans realized that Dewey, a proven vote-getter, was their only chance to retain the governorship. All of a sudden he became the indispensable man. . . . It does not appear that he was any too hard to persuade.

Now the Republicans will probably have Dewey with them as an active hand in politics for some time to come. Should he be re-elected he is bound to play an important part in the next GOP national convention—and he will be hard to beat. It is quite conceivable that by 1952 he could be similarly persuaded to lend himself to another "draft" movement for the presidential nomination.

Other GOP White House aspirants will keep an interested eye on what happens in New York this Fall. Whatever may have been his past intentions, Mr. Dewey appears to be very much back in the picture.

Roy Harris Is Right

The Editors: In reading Jack Tarver's article about Georgia's highways, I fully agree with Roy Harris. They are a disgrace to the State of Georgia.

On our vacation this Summer we traveled over several states, and found all the highways in almost excellent condition. We were almost ashamed to tell people we were from Georgia. I know just what Mr. Harris was talking about, for we visited my husband's mother at Wrens, Ga., and after traveling through so many other states during the early part of the Summer made us notice just how bad the conditions were in our home State.

You can also notice how well kept the rest-rooms in filling stations of other states, clean, plenty paper toweling and in excellent sanitary condition, but you can always know when you cross the Georgia state line. There are never any towels, toilet paper, etc., in hardly any of the service stations in Georgia, and we do try to pick the best.

I'm not a friend of the present governor as Mr. Tarver said about Mr. Harris, but I do wish conditions could get better in the State where I was born and raised. So when I do visit other states I can say proudly, "I'm from Atlanta, Ga."

Noted With Interest

The Editors: The citizens of this section noted with interest, amusement and disgust the instructions of the honorable Grand Jury to the people of Fulton County as to the exercise of their right of franchise in the coming general election.

Any individual giving the matter of extending the county unit system to our general election serious thought must readily admit that this is a question on which both sides can claim considerable merit. I have been somewhat inclined to think that the citizens opposing this change probably had the best of the argument, while it cannot be denied that supporters can justly claim that they are only following the pattern of government set up by the founders of the republic and the Federal Constitution, which, as we know, was declared by the incomparable English statesman, William Ewart Gladstone, to be the most wonderful document ever conceived by the mind of man.

The writer is not partisan, but, as stated, had been inclined to agree with the opposition. However, he in common with many citizens of the county of all classes, resents any such puerile stuff coming from the Grand Jury. The people of Fulton County, and the people of the entire State, will exercise their own judgment and make their choice without any instructions from any Grand Jury and our suggestion to this body is to stick to their job and hereafter omit any such egotistical displays of superior knowledge and intelligence. We will vote as we see fit.

The Sixth Commandment

The Editors: Notwithstanding a plain obligation of citizenship, it appears that there is to be a recrudescence of the harmful practice used during both world wars by certain individuals who, while qualified for military service, failed to recognize their obligation to the nation and used the transparent excuse of "conscientious objection to war" to keep themselves out of the military service. Letters recently published by you indicate that, as in the two past wars, these confused persons base their claim for special consideration and exemption from military duty upon the well-known Sixth Commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," which, according to Exodus 20, 1-17, was given to the Hebrews in 1491 B. C. Religious organizations and individuals who invoke this command as a shield against military service have apparently overlooked the fact that the author of the commandment repeatedly authorized and directed the Israelites to wage war. There were many such instances and, therefore, it is plainly apparent that the Sixth Commandment was not applicable to war service. A few examples will suffice to prove this point: Exodus 17, 8-16; Numbers 21, 1-3; Numbers 21, 23-25; Numbers 31, 1-2; Numbers 31, 6-18; Deuteronomy 2, 31-35; Deuteronomy 3, 1-7. Even the New Testament does not support the fanatical, wishful-thinking views of the conscientious objector concerning the Sixth Commandment, since, according to Luke 19, 27, Jesus commanded that His enemies be brought and slain before Him.

No one wants to go to war, but unless we defend our freedom and our country we will lose both. This nation is fortunate in that the majority of its young men agree with one of the founders of the nation, who said: "Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom, must, like men, undergo the fatigues of supporting it."

But They Grind

The Editors: To the United States Marines: Please don't be hurt over the recent insult sent your way—just consider the source.

To borrow the famous words of a very great leader, "Never have so many owed so much to so few." The real folks—the folks at home—know this to be true of you, and have hearts full of honor, respect and sincere gratitude for what you have done for us, and are doing.

We haven't forgotten, now will we, how, during the last war—when things looked blackest—all would breathe a sigh of relief and feel secure once more, when the news came that the Marines had landed. Maybe some day we will have a leader to whom we can render such respect and honor as we now give the Marine Corps. "The mills of the Gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small."

"Keep yourselves in the love of God." (John 21.)

Nature has a way of healing wounds. If the bark of a tree be knocked off, in due time the evidence of the bruise will be gone.

The vital processes in the tree will find a way to cover the scar.

It is a lesson we all should learn. When we let some slight, some misunderstanding, or even some wilful blow fester in our minds, is it not a sign that we have not in us life full and abounding?

God has designed that we should outgrow every friction, every fracture of the peace. Not in our own wisdom and strength but in union with Him it can be achieved.

May we so walk with Thee, Father, that Thy spirit shall control our attitudes and motives. Teach us to forgive, to forget, to forge ever onward.

Mr. Linder Skins a Cat

State Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder figures there are more ways than one to skin the proverbial cat.

The cat Mr. Linder is determined to skin at present is named out-of-state milk.

Last week a Federal District Court stopped the commissioner from prohibiting out-of-state milk from Georgia markets solely because it was not produced in this State.

So Mr. Linder, not to be outdone, decided to write a new set of rules. He now has done so and has given the winner of the Federal Court action, a Jacksonville, Fla., milk dealer, until Sept. 25 to prove his milk meets Georgia's requirements under the new regulations.

We have not seen the regulations, but an Atlanta city official, familiar with such things, has seen them and believes they cannot be enforced.

In a telegram to milk distributors about the State, Mr. Linder also criticized the Atlanta newspapers, which he declared "grossly and intentionally" misrepresented the Federal Court order. Confronted with this telegram by a Constitution reporter, Mr. Linder refused to say what was wrong with our editorial.

We said Judge Andrews prohibited Mr. Linder from barring out-of-state milk simply because it was not produced in Georgia. Is there anything erroneous about that statement, Mr. Linder.

We have an idea that what injured the commissioner's pride was our reference to his apparent ignorance of the United States Constitution which gives to Congress the power to regulate interstate commerce. Under Judge Andrews' order, and under the Constitution, Mr. Linder cannot prohibit out-of-state milk from being

One Ticket You Won't Fix

If everything went by schedule, the Rev. Charles A. Jackson, pastor of the Central Methodist Church at Fitzgerald, preached last night on "How to Fix a Traffic Ticket." At least that was the sermon subject announced by The Fitzgerald Leader. Invited as honor guests for the service were the city's policemen and firemen. That the sermon was not aimed at them is evidenced by the fact that Mr. Jackson said in issuing the invitation, "Our city can be congratulated on having such a splendid group of men on its law enforcement and fire prevention staffs. Recently these men entertained citizens of the community in a giant feast. We Methodists feel that they should be honored in turn." So it wasn't because the Fitzgerald Methodists felt they needed a special guard that they asked these honor guests, but rather that they felt the town's protectors deserved public recognition. As indeed they do, policemen and firemen everywhere.

Following the firemen into the acrid atmosphere of a smoke-filled, flame-seared furniture warehouse loft at 3 o'clock one morning taught me what those boys are up against. I lasted about 10 seconds in that hot spot, but the firehouse crew that was "mopping up" went right on about its business. And you can say the same about any town's policemen as they make their beats through the "hot spots."

I don't know what the Fitzgerald pastor had to say about traffic charges, but my guess is he told his congregation that eventually each of us must come up for judgment in a Court where there'll be no "fixing tickets" for anyone.

SPEAKING OF TRAFFIC, the press of Georgia has been plugging the Governor's request that the "law" bear down on violators of rules of the road. Chief Justice W. H. Duckworth, of the State Supreme Court, has backed up the Governor by letters to judges, ordinaries, and traffic court officials urging them to apply the law "promptly, universally, and fairly" in all cases that come before them.

Judge Mel Price, of the Atlantic Judicial Circuit, has taken his chief justice seriously. In a charge to the Long County Grand Jury at Ludowici, Judge Price called on jurors to join in this bearing down on traffic offenders. He declared that there must be lifting of drivers' licenses and more convictions for murder if the slaughter on the roads is to be stopped.

This judge recommended revocation of a driver's license for six months on the first drunk driving offense, five years in prison for the second offense, and life for the third.

Sounds a little tough, doesn't it? But the law must be tough, for as Judge Price said, "To get drunk and kill with a car is just as much murder as to get drunk and kill with a shotgun."

And the degree of intoxication should have no bearing in the case. Men and women must learn that getting under the wheel after just a few drinks is trespassing against your neighbor just the same as running amuck through his property, blasting away wildly with an M-1 rifle.

Santa Claus Goes to Arabia

Residents of Brookhaven have had a lump in their throats for a week. The young family down the street whose nesting activities they have watched with affectionate interest since the last war, has gone. A tricycle and a stroller neighbors sometimes stumbled over are missing from the sidewalk. The windows they saw a young bride make curtains for are now bare and dark. The clothesline that was perennially white with a snowfall of diapers now sags empty and untenanted.

The husband, they said, had to go back in the service. "To guard somebody's darned old oil wells in Arabia," they said. The wife and two babies went home to the grandparents. "But they had one special day before they parted," one of the neighbors reported chokily. "It was one of those hot, bright days before the storm. They went off somewhere and came back with their car loaded down with things late one afternoon."

"I wasn't snooping but watching from my window I couldn't help seeing that they had a lot of toys. They unloaded them with great stealth after the children were in bed. And then I saw them take in something I couldn't understand—a little freshly cut pine tree."

Later, when the young folks came to say goodbye the neighbors knew. They had celebrated Christmas in September.

"Santa Claus will be in Arabia Dec. 25," the young wife explained with quiet logic. "You see we HAD to have Christmas together."

A YOUNG DECATUR wife in a letter to us cries out against what she feels to be the injustice of calling inactive reserves before the active reserves.

"The men in active reserve units have been training as long as three years," she writes. "They certainly would expect, in time of war, to be called to active duty. That is what they have been training for. They are in it because they want to be. So I can't see that it is such a shock to wives and families of these men when they do leave. They have sort of known they would go since we got into another war."

"The people I feel for are the men who have just been picked out, individually, and whisked away. They hadn't counted on being called, at least before the active reserves. And these men are all veterans with families."

A Story He Doesn't Want to Write

In Hawkinsville Dispatch and News

Schools are open now, and kids leave their homes and are crossing streets the way kids do. For three months now, drivers have had things pretty much their own way. Local policemen haven't clamped down too much on the lady who rushed a bit to get her grocery shopping done in time for dinner, or the man who tried to beat out miniature traffic jams at 6 and 7 o'clock.

But, from here on out, things are gonna be different. City commissioners have issued a proclamation with teeth in it concerning reckless driving and the short circuit between the wheel and the front seat who is responsible, and we're happy to commend them for this timely and needed action.

Good citizens of this community have come into this office and told of near accidents they have witnessed involving teen-agers as well as adults.

You're lucky if your business or profession doesn't call for you to go out and see the result of a brake that didn't hold, or a stunt that didn't work. I cover them frequently. Too frequently.

If you're reading this over the breakfast or dinner table, put it down now, and wait until you've finished. But finish this before you get back under the wheel of your automobile.

You see, I don't want to carry the story of how little Mary Smith was crushed to death under the weight of an overturned car. I don't want to see her soft hair matted with blood and

"In my case, my husband was in service five years, seven months and six days in the last war. That's a pretty long time. We went to college after he finished his Army career. We finally in the past two years had gotten our feet on the ground. We have two children and a little home. . . . Then, without any idea at all that he would go to war, we were thinking of our future at last. On Aug. 5, he received a telegram; on Aug. 15, he was gone. We can't believe it has happened to us! And, since he left, I have talked with others who have been completely shocked the same as we were."

"We are not at all resentful, if we can help in this war we want to do our best. But it seems to me that these men, inactive reserves, that have had to drop everything and go, without warning, deserve a little recognition for what they have done. And wives, like men, who are left so quickly they don't know what happened, with children to care for and a home to keep going, need some encouragement from somewhere!"

A FULTON COUNTY lawyer who used to be better known in bars than before the bar, sent out cheery little announcements to all his friends the other day. They included a picture of him, a calendar encompassed with pictures of such nonalcoholic beverages as milk, coffee and water and these triumphant words: "One Year—Today!"

hear the screams of her mother or the sobs of her father.

I don't want to write the story of how young Johnny Jones, bragging about what his father's new car would "do," DID it one time too many. His obituary has no place in next week's paper.

If you're one of the careless drivers who think they're lord and master of those man-made machines, I'd rather bring your hides home, tan them and make a belt myself.

Make a mental note of this item and "paste" it on your windshield, right in front of the steering wheel where you can't miss it.

"(Your Name) this week ran over and killed _____, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. _____, when the child ran from behind a parked automobile on her way to school."

"(Your Name) stated that he was only traveling 30 miles an hour but had no time to put on brakes. He stated that he regretted the accident exceedingly."

I don't want to write that story—

Pricing Is Hard to Explain

WASHINGTON—I haven't sunk my teeth into a beefsteak in so long that I have forgotten what a salubrious experience this can be. I guess you'd call me an almost-vegetarian, strictly involuntary. This piteous situation, in which I chomp mostly rabbit food, began about two months ago when the butcher tried to charge my bride $1.33 a pound for lamb chops. She would have none of them. Nor would she settle for ground steak at $1.11 per pound. Anyhow, she said, she bet it was tough. Since then I have been getting eggs scrambled; vegetables dunked in cheese; fish, and chicken in so many guises that my whiskers are turning feathery. For special treats on Sunday we have hamburger, but not often because it costs 70 cents a pound.

That's why my interest was a good deal more than casual when Sen. Guy M. Gillette, Democrat, the white-haired investigator from Iowa, called in the butchers to ask 'em how come the price of meat was so high. What pained him was the fact that steers on the hoof have been selling for around 30 cents a pound all this year, while the price of steak has been bouncing like a kite in a high wind.

The Senator hauled out a chart which showed that steady line on live beef and above it another line, as jagged as the Sierra Nevada mountain range, to indicate the retail price on sirloin steak. It has ranged since the first of January from 75 cents a pound to $1.10.

Whenever it hits this high level for a couple of days, it skids down to around 90 cents (which Mrs. O. say still is no bargain) and then jumps up again.

J. Arnold Anderson, the solemn-faced gentleman who fixes the prices on meats for the Safeway Stores, Inc., in these parts, eyed the chart carefully and said: "This question of pricing, I'll admit, is very difficult to explain to a layman, but I'll try."

He did, too. He said you've got to take into account the fat for which he pays full carcass price and sells for three cents a pound, and the bone, which he peddles for a penny. No wonder the price of steak is high.

Senator Gillette, whom you'll remember as the man who tangled with the high price of coffee without having much effect on it, still couldn't understand why there should be such wild gyrations in the price of steaks.

Anderson said that was easy. Every time he jacks up the tag on sirloin to what he considers a proper level, the Mrs. Othmans of the land rebel.

So he cuts the price and when the ladies buy up his surplus, he raises it again. The explanation, he said, is as simple as that.

Senator Gillette called in a number of packing house men; they all said that their profits were so low they never knew for certain when they were going in the red. They said they had to pay high prices to farmers; if they didn't, the latter would sell to somebody who would.

The Senator was not satisfied. Neither was I.

BILLY ROSE

The Confession Of a Copycat

A friend of mine who lives in Greenwich Village swears he heard a moocher deliver the following spiel to a lady on West Eighth Street:

"You ask, Madam, how a man with a Harvard accent got to be a bum. Well, you've given me a civil dime and that entitles you to a civil answer: The fact of the matter is that I speak with a Harvard accent for the best of reasons—I went to Harvard."

"In my third year at college, I decided I wanted to be a playwright, and shortly after I graduated cum laude, I finished my first play. And it was a great moment for me, some months later, when I stood in the wings of a Broadway theater and watched its opening performance."

Reminiscent "Next morning, the critics reported that the play had its entertaining moments, but was a bit on the reminiscent side. The first act reminded Atkinson of Clifford Odets; the second, according to Chapman, smacked of Bill Saroyan, and the third, in Morehouse's opinion, was a steal from Eugene O'Neill."

"Well, nobody likes to be accused of pilfering the brains of his betters, and so I gave up the theater and tackled music. I rented a piano, enrolled at Juillard, and after three years of hard work succeeded in having my first symphony performed by the Philharmonic at Carnegie Hall."

"The critics unanimously pronounced it a good symphony, a very good one, in fact—but reminiscent. Olin Downs pointed out there was a bit of Sibelius in my main theme, and Virgil Thompson, always the perfectionist, said he was intrigued by the curious blend of Wagner and Debussy in the second movement."

"I, of course, still had my heart set on expressing my own individuality, and so I abandoned music and turned to oil painting. I went to the Art Students League, sketched at Provincetown for several Summers, and after completing over a hundred canvases I was fortunate enough to get myself a one-man show at a Fifty-seventh Street gallery."

"It was the same old story: The art critics went out of their way to be kind, but once again I was Joe Reminiscent. My landscapes, it seemed, reminded them of Corot; the coloration of my still lifes was too Matisse-ish, and as for my scenes at Coney Island, one writer opined that Reginald Marsh wouldn't be out of line if he instituted suit."

Facing Facts "Well, Madam, I had to face up to facts. It was obvious that the arts would never bring out the Real Me, and so after brooding about it I decided to follow the calling which produces more rugged individualists than any other—cab driving."

"Again I went through the necessary apprenticeship. A garage mechanic in my neighborhood taught me how to maneuver in traffic. I studied the street maps of all five boroughs, and finally, through a political connection, I was granted a license by the Hack Bureau."

"The very first day, however, I hadn't been out of the garage more than 20 minutes when a motorcycle cop blew his whistle and pulled alongside. As he wrote out a ticket he explained I had been speeding like Barney Oldfield, rounding corners like Floyd Davis, and burning oil like Sir Malcolm Campbell."

"Well, I was so annoyed with myself that I got out of the cab and left it in the middle of the street."

"Since I was reminiscent, even as a cab driver, I made up my mind right then and there that the only way I could ever find myself was to be myself. And that, Madam, is how I happened to become a bum."

CHANNING COPE

A Very Good Chicken Dog

Please don't tell Jock, or Missy, or Tammie, because, after all, I belong to them, and I ought to work for their interests, and it may be that what I am about to say could be regarded by them as betrayal, and I wouldn't want that to happen.

I wouldn't betray them for anything but the truth is that I became acquainted with a dog up in Virginia who is a mighty smart dog and who is likewise a very loyal dog to his family, his hearth and his home. He has a cute name, too, "Bongo-Bongo."

First Meeting Bongo and I first met when he came from under his master's shelter and took hold of my right foot with good strong teeth and held me fast until his master came forth and declared me to be a friend. Then he dropped his hold, grinned friendly-like, and wagged his odd-shaped tail. I was then permitted to pet him and to join his inner circle. The inner circle was his special care, four happy children, all under seven years of age. No wonder he didn't want me to pass the frontier without the proper credentials.

When relieved from his baby-sitting duties, he relaxes in the nearby forest by relentlessly discovering, rooting out, and treeing a snarling little vermin called the groundhog. I don't know much about groundhogs, but Bongo-Bongo's owners say that they are not supposed to run up trees when pursued and that all of the experts say that the groundhogs do not go up trees. Despite all of this expert testimony, however, Bongo-Bongo puts them up trees in short order, and remains at the base of the tree until some member of the family comes along and disposes of the groundhog. They are pests up in Virginia, ruining land, gardens, and crops.

Bongo-Bongo is also a great chicken dog. That is, he is a great help to the Missus in her work of gathering eggs, getting the hens back into the chicken house when they slip into the garden, and in keeping the broody hens from loafing in the nests. He enters the hen house, pulls the broody ones off the nests (if they peck at him when he gets close he knows they are trying to set; if they do not peck at him he knows they are in the nest to lay an egg and he doesn't bother them), guards the egg basket, will pick up a stray egg and place it in the basket or if it is broken ask his Missus if he can have it and will proceed to eat it if she agrees.

Setter In the garden he runs down the marauding hen, seizes her with his front paws and sits down on her till the Missus comes along and lifts the hen over the fence into the hen yard. That's Mr. Bongo-Bongo, of Virginia.

My own Missy, Jockie, and Tammie would act a little differently under the various situations. They'd run those groundhogs all right, and they'd guard the place all right, but if they got in behind those chickens, we'd have more fricassee on our hands than we could use up in a month of Sundays. We sure would, in a very few moments. And they would be led by the gentle Missy, a stately grandmother, no less.

But don't tell them I've been talking about them. After all, we don't need many chickens, anyway.

A New Dairy Enterprise

In The Barlow Herald

One of the finest and most promising operations in the State is that of the Pet Milk Company, which is operating milk receiving stations at Washington and Royston for counties in Northeast Georgia, the Georgia Department of Commerce reports.

Approximately 600 farmers in the Washington area and some 500 in the Royston area are selling milk daily to the Pet corporation. The milk is picked up at the farmer's milk box each morning by the truck driver. Every two weeks the farmer receives his milk check.

Approximately 100 FFA and 4-H boys and girls in that area are among those selling milk. Their checks run from $4.50 to $60 every two weeks.

Working through businessmen and corporations, Attorney Earle Norman, of Washington, has raised over $26,000 in the last five years for purchase of purebred Jersey calves for FFA and 4-H boys. Each calf is placed in a "chain contract" and given to the boy without any charge whatever, and then the boy delivers back a three-month-old heifer calf to be given to another. At present, some 147 of these contracts have been executed.

These operations in Northeast Georgia will give you some idea of how the dairy industry can flourish in our State. In the general connection, it is good that many of our farmers are discovering the multiple advantages of grass cultivation in replenishing lands worn by erosion and in providing additional farm income.

Who Was Fulton?

When Senator Williamson, of Newton, introduced a bill in the Assembly of 1853 to create a new county from the lands of DeKalb, he left the name blank. When the bill came up for passage, Senator John Collier, of DeKalb, asked that it be amended by inserting the name "Fulton" in the blank space. This was done and the bill passed. There is nothing on record to indicate who Collier had in mind when he named the new county Fulton; and nobody was interested enough to ask! It has been generally published, even in some state histories, that the county was named for Robert Fulton, of steamboat fame. This is most improbable. It is believed by those who have spent much time in research on the subject that the Senator intended to honor Hamilton Fulton. Now long forgotten, he was a far-sighted Scotchman who came to Georgia as Chief Engineer in 1826. He was the first to urge the building of railroads thru this section (there were only 22 miles of railroads in the world at that time) and made the first surveys from Tennessee to the Atlantic Ocean. This was eleven years before Stephen Long laid out the State railroad over almost the same route. Enduring untold hardship in the wilds of this unsettled area, Engineer Fulton completed the work that caused the state to abandon the idea of a network of canals for transportation. His reward was to be fired by one of Georgia's first vicious demagogue governors, John Clark.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

So Bridges Is at Large

NEW YORK—Judicial opinions are so complex that in my experience attempts to present majority and minority and weigh them fully in newspaper discussion is almost futile and often a waste of white paper. So, in presenting the dissent of Judge Clifton Mathews in the Harry Bridges bail case, I note that the majority opinion already has been fully reported and examined editorially, pro and con. Judge Mathews was overruled. He would have sustained Judge Harris, of the trial court, who first admitted Bridges to bail pending appeal but later, when the Korean War was under way, granted a request of the Department of Justice that bail be revoked and that he be arrested and locked up as a menace. Bridges' sentence is five years, not for being a Communist, but for lying when he swore he wasn't. He is master of the Pacific waterfronts where ships are loading for the military front in the Orient in which the enemy is the protégé of Soviet Russia which is the source of the Communist conspiracy against this nation.

"In support of the Government's motion to revoke bail," Judge Mathews wrote, "an affidavit by John H. McGowan, an investigator for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, was filed. At the conclusion of the hearing, Judge Harris delivered an oral opinion and made an order granting the Government's motion and revoking the order admitting Bridges to bail. Bridges filed in this court a motion to vacate the order revoking bail. My associates think that motion should be granted and have so ordered. I dissent."

There follow some legal citations, the kernel of which is a rule which says, "The court or the judge allowing bail may at any time revoke the order admitting the defendant to bail."

"That means exactly what it says," Judge Mathews wrote. "Having the force and effect of law it should be recognized and treated as such and not ignored or disregarded. . . . The ground stated in the Government's motion was that after being admitted to bail, he had pursued, and, if permitted to continue at large, would continue to pursue 'a course of conduct and activities dangerous and detrimental to the welfare and inimical to the safety and national security of the United States.' That, if true, was in my opinion, a good ground for such revocation."

"In finding Bridges guilty . . . the jury necessarily found that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party. That finding was amply supported by evidence. The evidence tended to show that Bridges was a Communist Party member from 1933 up to the time of the trial. There was no evidence that he had ceased to be a member after the trial. Instead, the McGowan affidavit showed, or strongly tended to show, that Bridges was still a member when the Government moved to revoke bail pending appeal. Judge Harris found and was warranted in finding that he was still a member when that order was revoked."

"The Communist Party is a conspiracy, one object of which is to overthrow the Government of the United States by force and violence. Communist Party members are parties to that conspiracy. The Communist Party is dominated and controlled by Soviet Russia. Communist Party members are servants of Soviet Russia."

"For several years preceding June 25, 1950, the United States was engaged in a so-called 'cold' war with Soviet Russia. The so-called 'cold' war became a 'shooting' war on June 25, 1950, when Soviet Russia's North Korean Communist Army invaded South Korea and the armed forces of the United States were ordered by the President to repel the invasion. The 'shooting' war has continued. When it will end, nobody knows.

"Ships transporting American men, munitions and supplies to the Korean War front are moving and must continue to move, from Pacific Coast ports, including those of Hawaii. Employed at these ports are thousands of workers, longshoremen and others, who belong to local unions affiliated with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union of which Bridges is and has been for many years president and directing head. This is a position of great influence and power."

"A Communist Party member could wish no better position from which to sabotage the American war effort and give aid and comfort to his North Korean Communist comrades. The danger is not a fanciful one. The ability of Bridges and his ILWU to paralyze Pacific Coast shipping has been demonstrated more than once."

"I quote from Judge Harris' opinion: ' . . . I am led to believe that he is one of the most potent figures in the Communist Party in America today. As such he is an agent dedicated to execute the Communist program nationally and internationally. As such agent his allegiance is not and cannot be to the United States. His conduct since the inception of hostilities in Korea is such as to justify this court in concluding that when the welfare of this country and its armed forces are at stake, as opposed to a Communist regime, his loyalty is with the Communists.'"

By order of Judges Healy and Orr, Bridges is at large today.

THE REAL ISSUES IN THE ALKALI STRIKE*

THE increasing importance of the chemical industry is nowhere more clearly evidenced, unfortunately, than in the presently-indicated shift of major attention of the Lewis brothers, John L. and Denny, to chemicals from coal, in their roughshod, arrogant drive for personal super-power in this country.

The Lewis-instigated 10-week strike of District 50, United Mine Workers, against the Solvay Process Co. is significant because the Lewis tactics and evident aims follow so closely the pattern in the coal industry—to disrupt the industry, imperil the national economy and national security, with the apparent sole aim of giving more personal control in the industry, and power over the American people, to the Lewis clan.

The alkali producers are only one segment of the chemical industry, but a very important segment, at the present time. During the past week, for instance, the soda ash shortage caused by the Lewis-ordered strike has resulted in frantic efforts of Army procurement officials to maintain the flow of glass containers for acid to Korea to prevent immobilization of Army tanks in the war crisis there.

Solvay officials, aware that important customers are now desperately negotiating with foreign sources, not only on spot supplies but on longer term contracts, have gone far in concessions to settle the dispute.

Solvay has offered progressive wage rises over the next three years, a cost-of-living bonus plan similar to that in General Motors to protect workers against possible price inflation, a pension plan comparable with the best offered in other industries including guaranteed-minimum retirement incomes of $100 a month.

Solvay officials desire the maximum in production and sales, which means maximum employment. They realize that loss of business to foreign or other competitors means less money for the owners and for their workers.

In the coal industry, however, the Lewis brothers have evidenced unconcern over the loss of coal markets to competitors caused by their union demands—so long as they increased their personal power and control over those miners still employed.

Similarly, the Lewis-dominated union spokesmen have sneeringly rejected all of Solvay's settlement offers, without indicating any minimum terms they might agree to, eventually.

The key to the terms they seek, however, apparently is to be found in such demands as a pension scheme along the lines of that in the coal industry—which most actuaries claim is unsound as there is no correlation between what is paid in and what is paid out; and, even more significantly, the stipulation that only workers that are loyal union members in good standing with U. M. W. union leaders can qualify for any pension at all, irrespective of length of service or loyalty to the company—or their country.

In this probably the most critical period in our history, the chemical industry is being looked to as the country's major source of strength, as a protection against outbreak of another world war, and, if such a war does develop, as our best hope for eventual victory.

Should the Lewis brothers attain a position where they can hold this industry under such control as they have been able to attain in the coal industry, obviously it would give them a position of tremendous power over the American people. This might be possible if they are allowed to win a spectacular triumph in the Solvay strike.

The Lewis vs. Solvay battle, thus, appears to be an issue of major significance not only to Solvay but to the entire chemical industry and, more important, to the American people.

* Beginning with Solvay, the Lewis Brothers have spread this strike to Diamond Alkali and Wyandotte Chemicals.

Patty

a study in happiness

Patty wouldn't have a diamond bracelet . . . wouldn't look twice at a mink coat. But she's obviously ecstatic over her little rubber duck from Rich's.

Patty's reaction points out perfectly the true nature of happiness . . . variable and highly personal . . . not measured in dollars and cents, but a matter of individual taste and need.

And around such an analysis of happiness, an integral part of Rich's policy is centered . . . complete satisfaction in every purchase, regardless of price. So at Rich's the little things count too. Here even your smallest needs and wishes receive the most careful attention. For at Rich's happiness wears no price tag, and satisfaction is wrapped in every package.

Greek Girl Joins
Freedom CrusadeBy DORIS LOCKERMAN
Constitution Associate Editor

We have a lot to learn about propaganda. The bellow-and-boast tactics of Mussolini succeeded in Italy for awhile. The screeching falsehoods of a mad-dened Hitler persuaded Germans to follow him into a world conquest.

But the Reds have an entirely different method from either, far more ingenious and insidious.

Sophie Papassinesiou, a Greek girl who is touring the South speaking eloquently against Communism as she saw it in her native land, explains the subtle method of the Kremlin.

"They are clever, these Reds. They are not blunt. They do not attack, attack, attack, like the Nazis, neither in warfare nor in conversation. They simply use each contact to leave a little drop of poison. People do not realize what is happening to them. Suddenly, as if they had had too many injections of germs, they find they are flaming Communists."

"A Communist talks against Communism when he knows it is smart to do so. He may rant against the 'imperialist' designs of the Russians... but remark favorably on the fine working conditions they have created. The next man may rave against the same imperialism, but observe that the Reds have created a miracle in education. And so it goes, each brush leaving a little more red."

That happened in Greece, where Communist guerrillas were finally put down last Christmas after nine years of continuous war, without armistice.

Little Greece became the only country to defeat Communism. In every other country where the Reds have sought aggression or infiltration they have been successful... Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Roumania, China and the others.

The struggle against them left 750,000 refugees, 1,400 villages destroyed, 400,000 orphans, and 28,000 children abducted in the real heartbreak of it all.

"That is what we cannot bear now... those 28,000 children who were taken from their families by the Communists and captured. That happened before. Turkey kidnaped children before its occupation of Greece in the 15th and 16th centuries, and they were returned as the famous elite soldiers who fought against their own country. We know our children now are being trained to fight against their own people when they are grown."

The Marshall Plan has worked in Greece, Miss Papassinesiou says. The money has been used for reconstruction and for improving the soil, so badly needed, and has transformed much waste land to arable acreage.

The Greeks handled their problem of Greek Communists well, she believes. It was the first time they had their own citizens as prisoners, and that posed a great problem. The island of Macaronis was taken for a rehabilitation experiment, to set up the "right atmosphere" for Communist Greeks who had been fighting against patriots as guerrillas.

"Discussion was open and encouraged. There were no re-proaches permitted. And more than 23,000 of the 23,800 have already become anti-Communists."

Miss Papassinesiou is 25, and was graduated from the University of Georgia two years ago on a Georgia Rotary Scholarship. She has volunteered to work in the Crusade for Freedom in any way possible.

"I believe in that," she said, her dark eyes gleaming. "I know that men's minds can be changed. Opinions can alter. This statement of the dignity of man under God will impress many poor souls behind the Iron Curtain and encourage those who stand on the borderline to stand more firmly."

With her attendants wearing gowns of emerald green and gold satin, Miss Angela Lucas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas, became the bride of Crist Francisco, of Orlando, Fla., Sunday afternoon at the Greek Orthodox Church. Father Panos Constantines officiated.

The bride was gowned in a white satin model featuring a neckline embroidered in seed pearls and bugle beads. Her veil of French illusion was attached to a beaded tiara, and she carried a prayer book topped with a white orchid and lilies of the valley.

Miss Anna Lucas was her sister's maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Misses Lucy Theologis, Dot Alex, Peggy Carlos, Ann Mobley, Niki Orfanides, of Tarpon Springs, Fla., and Miss Helen Michalos, of DeLand, Fla.

Louis Ellades, of Gainesville, Fla., was best man, assisted by Mrs. Eula Carasatos, of Charleston, S. C. Groomsmen were Johnny Francisco, Johnny Demopolous, and George Tarnoff, all of Orlando; Pete Manot, of Greenville, S. C.; and Tony Kalogridis, of Winter Haven, Fla. Ushers were Steve Marinos, Michael Carlos, Gus Orfanides, Pete Matrangos, Pete Kalogridis, of Winter Haven, Fla., and Louis Michalos, of DeLand, Fla.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception at a private club. Miss Niki Orfanides, of Tarpon Springs, Fla., kept the bride's book.

The couple will reside in Orlando.

Miss Lakin's Bridesmaids
Wear Emerald Green

With her attendants gowned in effective frocks of emerald green faille, offset with small bouquets of white Puggi chrysanthemums bordered in English ivy, Miss Margaret Nan Lakin was married to Donald L. Whittemore, Jr., of West Newton, Mass., at a brilliant afternoon ceremony held Saturday at the Cathedral of Christ the King.

After the nuptial service, the bride's mother, Mrs. Whitman Lakin, entertained at a reception at the Capital City Country Club.

The Rev. John McDonough was the officiant. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Robert C. Hunt. A slim brunette, she was a lovely figure in her bridal gown of white satin fashioned with a cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of illusion was gathered to a beaming bandeau of satin, embroidered in seed pearls. She carried a round bouquet of valley lilies centered with white Cymbidium orchids.

The bride's attendants, who wore cloches and slippers to match their dresses and short white gloves, included Miss Lane Whitman as her cousin's maid of honor, and Miss Mary Bailey, of Griffin; Miss Margaret Newman, of Waynesboro, Pa.; Misses Sally Clay, Callie Huger and Harriet Wigham as bridesmaids.

Robert Whittemore, of West Newton, Mass., was his brother's best man, and serving as groomsmen were Charles White, of Natick, Mass.; Lawrence Rugo, of Marblehead Neck, Mass.; James Dwyer, of Woodlaw, N. Y.; Richard B. Cole, Jr., and Donald White, of West Newton, Mass.

Seating the guests were George W. Woodruff, John O. Chiles, George B. Raine, Hix Green, Francis L. Abreu and Brooke Reeve.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Donald L. Whittemore, of West Newton, Mass., received with Mrs. Lakin and the wedding party at the reception. Misses Anna Warren and Lucia Sharp kept the bride's book, and assisting in cutting the wedding cake were Misses Wingfield Ellis, Ann Boon, Rennie and Foster Jones, Mary Leavell Moses, Betty Taylor and Helen Knox.

Following the service, Mrs. Bankston entertained at a reception at her home on Piedmont Avenue, with the groom's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William C. Waters, Jr., receiving with her. The lovely young bride wore a princess gown of heirloom lace belonging to Mrs. Ethel Allin Russell. Her illusion veil was draped from a matching lace cap, and she carried a prayer book topped with sprays of fleur d'amour.

The bride's attendants, in American beauty satin, offset with white Puggi chrysanthemums, included Miss Louise Tennent, maid of honor; Mrs. Walker Bankston, matron of honor; Misses Claire Clement, Virginia Davis, Jacolyn Horton, Tommie Jean Roberts, of Valdosta; Nell Wheelchel, of Gainesville; Mrs. Russell Lewis and Mrs. Dawson Owens, of Albany, bridesmaids. Anne Robertson was the junior bridesmaid.

Dr. Waters served as best man for his son, and the groomsmen included Richard Waters, Paul Leamy, Preston R. Miller, Jr., Donald Parsons, Ben C. Milner, Jr., Russell J. Lewis, William K. Murphy, and C. D. Stone, of Augusta.

Dr. William Little Funkhouser, Dr. W. Perrin Nicholson, Homer Starr, N. E. Parker, Boykin Pennington and Charles M. Brown seated the guests.

Mr. Waters and his bride left for a wedding trip to New Orleans. They will reside in Atlanta.

With her brother, J. Walker Bankston, giving her in marriage, Miss Sarah Ann Bankston, only daughter of Mrs. Clement Bankston, became the bride of William Carter Waters, III, on Saturday evening at one of the prettiest ceremonies of the season. Dr. John L. Horton officiated at St. Mark Methodist Church.

Debutantes Pick Charity,
Declare 'Open' Season

At its second meeting held Sunday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving Club, the recently organized Debutante Club of 1950-51 revised its list of members to include 24 girls, announced an "open" social season, except for one month from Dec. 10 to Jan. 10, and selected its charity, the Home for Cerebral Palsied Children on Ponce de Leon Avenue.

With Miss Anne Warren, the President, presiding, the correct membership roster, which was revised to include additional names and to drop some who had decided not to make their bows, was announced as follows: Misses Ann Boon, Anne Warren, Mildred Tye, Alice Wilson, Jane Woodham, Nancy Fraser, Callie Huger, Wingfield Ellis, Marilyn Cox, Marilyn McNaughton, Renee Reinhard, Lucy Crane, Barbara Watkins, Harriet Wigham, Harriet Hallman, Elizabeth Smith, Sally Dugger, Betty Jo Gann, Gladys Lamb, Helen Lee, Alice Wright, Louise McNeel, of Marietta; Patricia Corleyou, of Marietta; and Dolle Annall, of Newnan.

The first party for the new club will be a luncheon to be given Thursday, Sept. 14, with Charles H. Jagels as host at Davison's. Another party discussed was the annual Halloween Ball to be held at the Driving Club on Saturday, Oct. 28, at which the club members will be presented as a unit. Each girl will be allowed two escorts and her flowers will be limited to two bouquets.

The club decided on an "open" social season, except for the month during the Christmas holidays, from Dec. 10 to Jan. 10, when each girl may be honored at four parties, in addition to an individual tea if she so desires. The big debutante ball at which all members of the club will be presented will be held Dec. 29.

Ways and means of contributing to the club's charity were discussed, but no action was taken.

Dr. Waters served as best man for his son, and the groomsmen included Richard Waters, Paul Leamy, Preston R. Miller, Jr., Donald Parsons, Ben C. Milner, Jr., Russell J. Lewis, William K. Murphy, and C. D. Stone, of Augusta.

Dr. William Little Funkhouser, Dr. W. Perrin Nicholson, Homer Starr, N. E. Parker, Boykin Pennington and Charles M. Brown seated the guests.

Mr. Waters and his bride left for a wedding trip to New Orleans. They will reside in Atlanta.

With her brother, J. Walker Bankston, giving her in marriage, Miss Sarah Ann Bankston, only daughter of Mrs. Clement Bankston, became the bride of William Carter Waters, III, on Saturday evening at one of the prettiest ceremonies of the season. Dr. John L. Horton officiated at St. Mark Methodist Church.

Following the service, Mrs. Bankston entertained at a reception at her home on Piedmont Avenue, with the groom's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William C. Waters, Jr., receiving with her. The lovely young bride wore a princess gown of heirloom lace belonging to Mrs. Ethel Allin Russell. Her illusion veil was draped from a matching lace cap, and she carried a prayer book topped with sprays of fleur d'amour.

Maico Introduces Revolutionary 'Top Secret' Hearing Aid

No-Roach Is Modern Way To Control Roaches and Ants

Today it's so easy to control household pests, such as roaches, ants and waterbugs. A new product—called Johnston's No-Roach—can be brushed—just where you want it. This is a colorless, odorless, stainless coating that kills crawling insects, and then stays effective for months to kill the strays that wander in over it.

Brush No-Roach between sink and food cabinets, around cabinets, garbage pails, pipes, etc. Brushed across window and door sills. It will kill the pests that enter the home. Then you won't be afraid to invite your friends into the kitchen for that midnight snack.

Johnston's No-Roach is on sale at Rich's Housewares. Prices are: Half pint, 69¢; pint, $1.09; quart, $2.98.

No more messy powder sprinkling or all-over spraying when you control roaches, ants and waterbugs the modern No-Roach way.

EFFECTIVE — "How to Give Household Pests the Brush" is the title of this picture. Use Johnston's No-Roach, sold at Rich's Housewares, for quick results.

G-E Gas Furnace Is Featured By Thompson Coal Co. Here

You can be your own weatherman when you have the Thompson Coal Company install a G-E Gas or Oil Furnace in your home.

The Thompson Coal Company is famous as comfort specialists. They can scientifically "Comfort-Dition" any home or office regardless of size with the essential heating equipment to make a truly comfortable place in which to work or live.

Right now you'll want to consider also Thompson-approved weatherstripping and insulation.

In addition, the Thompson Coal Company is at present featuring G-E Air Wall Heating—the amazing new method of distributing heat from warm air type heating units—either gas or oil-fired. The air is raised to a higher temperature in the heating unit and sent quickly through special air wall ducts and registers and distributed to each room in your home. The cold outside wall is warmed and therefore radiates heat. Heat is uniform from floor to ceiling.

Many practical Atlanta property owners are making arrangements now to guarantee greater comfort next winter. A Thompson engineer will be glad to call at your convenience and make a free survey of your heating needs. Your heating plant should be one which best suits your specific requirements—should be properly sized, designed, engineered, installed and serviced to insure full benefits of comfort, convenience and economy. You are assured of all this when you buy G-E and when you buy it from the Thompson Coal Company.

A couple of Thompson customers give excellent down-to-earth descriptions of G-E heating units. One said: "I like the new G-E Gas-Fired Furnace because less heat goes up the chimney and more heat goes into my home and it takes up so little floor space. Another volunteered: "I found I saved money on my G-E Oil-Fired Furnace simply because it burned all the oil." All oil-fired furnaces cannot do this.

There is still time to make your installation before winter.

Tommy Thompson, president of the Thompson Coal Company, invites one and all to visit his company's spacious showroom displaying all the many units which are

Maico Unit Contains Many Improvements

Many improvements have been made in instruments for the hard-of-hearing during the past few years. But—have you ever wished for a hearing aid that would let you hear everything you wanted to hear without all the confusing background sounds, clothing noises and other irritating noises that you DID NOT want to hear?

Such an instrument is the new "Model J" Maico hearing aid, recently introduced to the nation after a remarkable series of tests in the field and laboratory. Response to the new "Top Secret" Maico aid has been highly favorable. It was announced today by W. H. McClain, Jr., manager of the Atlanta Maico office, 225 Peachtree Arcade. The new Maico aid is shown in the accompanying photograph.

Maico's scientists know that the commonest complaint of the nation's 800,000 hearing aid users is "hearing noises." This scratchy, crackling or swishing sound is caused by rubbing a suit or dress fabric against the sensitive hearing aid microphone. "Some hard-of-hearing people become so nervous from this noise that they actually abandon their instrument," Mr. McClain said.

Now comes a hearing instrument—the Maico "Top Secret"—that cuts clothing noise to almost nothing. It's done by locating the microphone on top of the aid instead of the usual position on the case-front. In addition, the microphone is recessed, and is further protected by a special mounting technique from other unwanted mechanical vibrations.

"As a result," stated Mr. McClain, "clothing seldom contacts the microphone's 'live' surface, and the wearer hears with minimum friction interference."

The new hearing instrument was named "Top Secret" both because of the way it was secretly tested before its release to the market, and because of the revolutionary new concept of placing the microphone at the top of the instrument. A selected panel of 250 experienced hearing aid users throughout the country received models of the instrument and wore them for nearly a year. These "field observers" then prepared confidential critical reports for the Maico firm, and their suggestions determined the final form of the new hearing aid.

The Maico staff invites you to PETITE AND POWERFUL—Extremely small and light, Maico's new "Top Secret" hearing aid is not only comfortable to wear but easy to conceal as well. It has been acclaimed by users everywhere. For full particulars, call AL. 1591, or visit Maico Hearing Service, 225 Peachtree Arcade.

"Look your best as you hear your best." Visit Maico Hearing Service, whose modern offices and fitting rooms are located at 225 Peachtree Arcade, or telephone AL. 1591. If you reside in the Augusta area, visit 305 Masonic building, Augusta, Ga., telephone 4-3326, where Roy C. Patrick will greet you. You may have free demonstration without obligation in either city. Discover how you, too, can enjoy better hearing and more secret hearing at the same time.

'Whiffen Puffs' New Delicacy Offered by Gordon Foods, Inc.

Product Sold In 3 Different Tasty Flavors

Gordon Foods, Inc., announces that the new, delightful different WHIFFEN PUFFS are available in stores throughout the Atlanta area.

According to reports from those who have tried the new Whiffen Puffs, it promises to be a popular addition to the famous line of Gordon fine foods. The new product is processed in Atlanta and is packed in colorful double-thick cellophane bags.

A feature of the new Whiffen Puffs is their three distinctive flavors. The crisp, puffy flakes may be had in a golden flake with a tangy cheese flavor; tomato garlic flavor—a flavor and a color from real tomato puree with just a trace of garlic; also, a rare and delicious onion flavor. To be offered soon is a real innovation in fine food flavor—real shrimp flavor. Various flavors in Whiffen Puffs are pure natural product—no artificial flavors at all.

For snacks, picnics or parties, the delicious puffy flakes make an ideal way to serve sauce dips. There's nothing like dunking Whiffen Puffs in your favorite sauce mix.

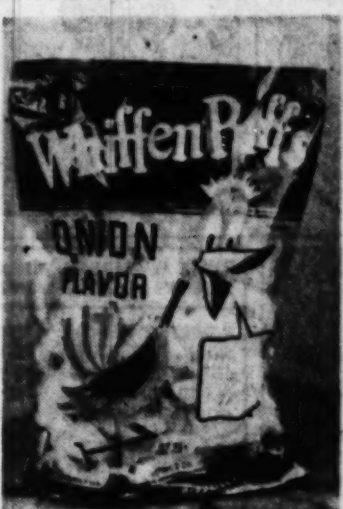

You, your family and your guests will all agree Whiffen Puffs are "LIKE NOTHING YOU'VE TASTED." Gordon Foods Inc., makers of Gordon's fresh Potato Chips and other fine foods are sole distributors of the new Whiffen Puffs.

Gordon's fresh Potato Chips, for years the favorite chip of particular hostesses, are famous for their extra freshness. In addition to Gordon's Potato Chips, the Gordon Foods Company makes vacuum-packed potato sticks, salted peanuts, cashews, pecans and mixed nuts, cakes, cookies, candies, pies and the famous Cheese Corn Snaps.

Ask for Gordon's and look for the little red truck on the label of Gordon-made products. Look for the Whiffen Puffs bird on the package of the new Whiffen Puffs. They're at your favorite store.

SNACKTIME—Everyone needs a little "break" now and then from the hustle and bustle of daily activity. When that time rolls around, delicious, tangy Whiffen Puffs with a beverage make the ideal snack, as Margaret Biggers and Jo Ann Turner demonstrate. Look for the colorful Whiffen Puffs cellophane bag at your grocer's, as shown below.

FIFTY-NINTH YEAR OF SERVICE

Simmons Plating Specializes In Expert Silverware Repair

The Simmons Plating Works on Pryor Street this month are entering their fifty-ninth year of service to the housewives of the nation. They are now the largest plant of its kind in the South and one of the largest in the country, employing a large staff of skilled silversmiths capable of making any kind of repairs on silverware.

They also maintain a casting department where they make missing parts of silverware such as lids, handles, spout, hinges, etc. They also carry a large stock of insulators which are used in coffee pots, both ivory and ebony, as well as a stock of the finest quality stainless steel knife blades.

Many housewives prefer to have the old blades removed and the stainless steel installed in their place. Silverware sent this old reliable firm is first repaired, then the old metal stripped to the base, buffed and polished and given a heavy coating of sterling silver plate.

which is backed and guaranteed by their long experience.

Some one hundred employees are employed there—all skilled artisans over many years of experience. Some of their employees are craftsmen from foreign countries and experts in the art of repairing and plating.

They have within the last few months added about ten thousand square feet of additional space to their present quarters.

A phone call to CYpress 8646 will bring a representative to estimate without obligation your silverware.

Bent, dented and tarnished band instruments take on new luster at Simmons Plating Works, 219 Pryor St., S. W., where a new department was recently created especially for the repair of musical instruments.

This new feature, recently added to this old reliable, long-established firm, is proving a big advantage to owners of band instruments who wish to keep their instruments in good repair and appearance at small cost.

They are able to make all repairs—keeping a large stock of parts of all makes on hand—and when an instrument leaves their plant it is the equal of a new one. No matter the condition when received, it will go out in perfect condition.

This portion of their business has increased so that they have had to add larger quarters to take care of this department, which is under the direct charge of Willard Jones. Only the most experienced men are employed in this department.

Schools and dealers are fast learning of the wonderful service rendered and appreciate the fine quality of work turned out. All work is carefully inspected when completed and guaranteed. Estimates gladly furnished and prices very reasonable.

By phoning CY. 8646, a representative will call and estimate your instruments.

News of Armed Forces

By RICHARD ASHWORTH

Four more Georgians—two of them Atlantans—are reported as participating in the United Nations battle against the North Korean Communists.

James T. Sibley, seaman, USN, of 2831 Tee Rd., S. W., recently took part in the record-breaking amphibious landing of the U. S. First Cavalry Division at Pohang-dong, which took eight days to complete.

Sibley is now serving aboard an amphibious flagship operating with Naval forces in the Far East.

The other Atlantans, Cpl. Francis J. Debes, husband of Mrs. Ruth Debes, of 1084 Edie Avenue, is serving in the G-2 Section of the Second Infantry Division in Korea. Debes compiles intelligence data which ultimately is used by field commanders in their battle strategy.

One of his recent duties was recording information about Communist propaganda leaflets which were turned over to interpreters for study.

And serving with that same First Cavalry Division, which Sibley helped land, are two of his fellow Georgians, both of whom are members of the Division's 27th Ordnance Company. They are Cpl. Floyd Castleberry, of Rising Fawn, and Pfc. Roger Jones, of LaGrange, last reported on the Waegwan fighting front.

Atlanta's With Navy

Four Atlantans recently took part in amphibious operations with the Navy near the U. S. coast and in the Mediterranean area.

J. H. Aldredge, Jr., West Point Cadet, of 1117 Haviland Dr., S. W., and Joseph C. Glenn, boatswain's mate, first class, USN, of 1126 Glenwood Avenue, took part in the cadet-midshipman operation which was climaxed with a full-scale amphibious assault landing on a Virginia beach.

The other two Atlantans, C. H. Smith, steward's mate, of 581 Bedford, Pl. N. E., and Raymond T. Herbig, fireman, of 788 Lawn St., S. W., participated in mock battle operations in the Mediterranean.

Herbig is a crew member of the destroyer USS D. J. Buckley and Smith is aboard the destroyer USS Hawkins.

Finish Army Training

In preparation for possible future combat duty, six Atlanta area residents are undergoing—or have completed training courses—with the Army.

One of them, Sgt. William T. Davis, husband of Mrs. Lillian Lucille Davis, of 139 Estoria St., S. E., has been promoted to the rank of sergeant first class after completing Army-wide competitive examinations covering technical and military subjects.

Two other Atlantans and a Decaturite are attending the Third Army Transportation Corps School at Fort Benning. They are Second Lieut. Claude D. Temple, of 865 Lindridge Way, N. E.; Capt. Charles W. Burroughs, of 465 E. Paces Ferry Rd., N. E.; and Maj. E. C. Dickey, of 336 Columbia Dr., Decatur.

Pvt. Jack C. Pugh, of 735 Glass St., N. W., has begun a course of indoctrination training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, and recruit Louis F. Campbell, 785 Memorial Dr., S. E., has been assigned to the 13th Infantry Regiment, Eighth Infantry Division at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Unit Gets Air Drill

Atlanta's 81st Infantry Division has received instruction in tactical air operations at Pope Air Force Base, N. C.

Staff officers of Ninth Air Force and the Air-Ground Operations section attached to Ninth Air Force Headquarters gave the instruction, which covered tactical air operations and organization and techniques used in close tactical air support of ground forces.

The Atlanta reserve unit is currently on two weeks' active duty at Fort Bragg, N. C.

9 In Mediterranean

On active duty with the Navy in the Mediterranean are nine Georgians, seven of whom are aboard the aircraft carrier USS Leyte, participating in a second phase of Mediterranean exercises with the U. S. and British Fleets.

The aircraft carrier crewmen are Carl F. Woodall, seaman, of Cornelia; Robert L. Sawyer, boilerman second class, husband of Mrs. R. L. Sawyer, of Lawrenceville; James A. Brady, seaman, of

Complete AF Basic

Moving up the armed forces training ladder are eight Georgians who recently completed training periods with the Army and Air Force.

Pvt. Buell H. Weems, of Rt. 2, Chipley, has completed his AF basic airman indoctrination course at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas, and Pvt. Wilburn L. Carle, of Rome, has been graduated from the Ordnance Automotive School at Atlanta General Depot.

Six native sons of Georgia have finished initial orientation training with the Third Armored Division at Fort Knox, Ky.

They are Ned Boyles, of 625 Hill St., S. E.; Clarence Chambers, of Stockbridge; Tom Holcomb, of Ball Ground; Joe Wentzell, of Griffin; Paul Henderson, of Louisville; and James Williamson, also of Griffin.

Georgians Assigned

Four Georgians who recently enlisted in the Army have been assigned to the 13th Infantry Regiment, Eighth Infantry Division, at Fort Jackson, S. C. A fifth Georgian who enlisted in the Air Force has been assigned to Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

The AF enlistee, Norman E. Boyett, Jr., of Albany, who made the second perfect score within three weeks on the first written qualification test of enlistees at the Albany recruiting sub-station.

The Fort Jackson recruits are Jack D. Carney, of Route 2, Cumming; Alvin R. Nicholson, of Athens; Charles A. Sherman, of Kingston; and Bobby E. Dickson, of Bogart.

Capt. Custer Command

Here and there: Capt. Ben Scott Custer, son of the late Judge William Vance Custer of the Albany Circuit, will assume command of New York's U. S. Naval Air Station Friday in ceremonies at Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn.

Capt. Custer, a native of Bainbridge, is the brother of Vance Custer, past president of the Georgia Bar Association. . . . The Navy's Battle Efficiency Pennant has been presented to Patrol Squadron Eight, of the Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, R. I. Commanding Officer of the squadron is Cmdr. Henry L. Floyd, husband of Mrs. Monterey Lloyd, of Smyrna. . . .

Capt. A. J. Walter, Military Officer at the Naval Air Station, Corpus Christi, Texas, has helped engineer a new recruit processing system at the air station which is expected to save taxpayers $25,000 per month. Under the plan of Capt. Walter, who is a native of Santee, all inductees and volunteers are sent to the Naval Air Station for physical exams by Navy doctors, rather than undergo expensive examinations by local physicians.

Smiling Zack Mosley, creator of The Constitution's "Smiling Jack" comic strip, has learned to fly a jet plane!

Mosley, whose home is in Stuart, Fla., recently piloted the Air Force T-33 jet plane at Williams Air Force Base, near Phoenix, Ariz. After a 600-mile-per-hour air jaunt, he exclaimed: "I'm jet happy now!"

Mosley, who regularly plugs things aeronautical in "Smiling Jack," is the only aviation cartoonist who is a licensed pilot himself.

He was invited to visit Air Force bases by Maj. Gen. Bob Harper, of the AFPT, who wanted him to help acquaint his readers with the latest aviation cadet program.

Readers of The Constitution and 178 other newspapers (with a total circulation of 25,000,000) in which Mosley's strip appears soon will see the results of the first-hand material gathered by the cartoonist.

Your Mind's Mirror

By LAWRENCE GOULD
Consulting Psychologist

Is wanting to be "different" neurotic?

Answer: Yes, insofar as it stems from being afraid to be like other people. There is a type of would-be sophisticate to whom anything that "everybody" does, eats or wears is terrible, regardless of its merits. But no neurotic is the chap who is afraid to make himself conspicuous by doing anything new or unusual. The unconscious issue in both cases is the same—a desire to attract attention which one person has to gratify at all costs, and the other feels to be so dangerous he dares not let it be known that he has it.

Should hospitals provide child play facilities?

Answer: Yes, says Miss E. Rita Davidson in the American Journal of Nursing. The emotional shock of severe illness should not be made worse by leaving a child no outlet for his energies and interests. It's part of the obligation of a hospital to provide for its child patients a play program, play materials, a sufficiently large nursing staff, and a recreational director. For the pleasant hospital can be made for a child, the least lasting effects of a stay there will be. All pain and no play makes a sick child sicker.

Does a child really hate discipline?

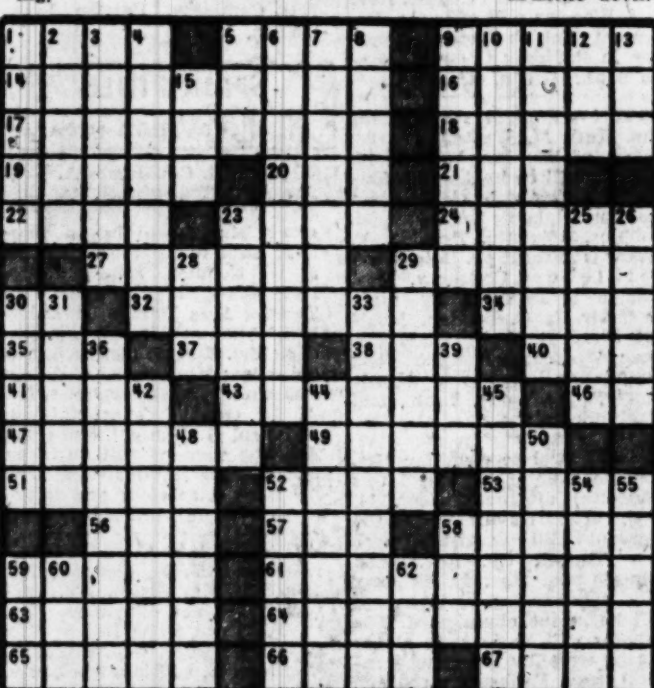

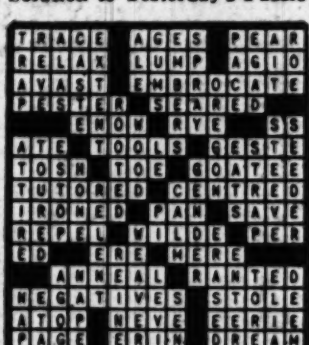

Answer: No. It naturally makes him angry to be punished, or to be forbidden to do something which he thinks will give him pleasure. But this painful side of discipline is more than made up for in the long run by the feeling of security he gets from knowing that he is in touch with someone who is wise enough to tell him what to do and strong enough to make him do it. From the moment a child realizes that he has to take the consequences of his actions and does not know what they will be, being without guidance terrifies him.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle

If It's Your Birthday—The next 12 months will go along without too much difficulty for you, although with a good many affairs for you to settle up or bring to a conclusion. Your best method of work will be one which uses persuasion and time-delaying tactics rather than force or aggression. There may be a shortage of money in the Spring, so plan your expenses for the first half of 1951 with some care. Love affairs are not impossible in here but will hardly be of the whirlwind variety, probably because of lack of money.

General Tendencies—The week ought to begin well even if a good many people feel that events should move faster and that not such a large amount of time should be given to details. However, it will be close to the end of the month before much speed can be picked up and attempts to hurry things along are apt to meet with quiet but effective opposition. People most apt to gain benefit from today will be those born in the last week of August but the late April people will not do too badly either.

Floods Rout Virginians; 2 Drowned

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 10.—(AP) Heavy rains turned small rivers and streams into raging torrents in western and central Virginia Sunday, drowning at least two persons and leaving hundreds of families homeless.

The brunt of the flash floods was borne by Rockbridge County, in west central Virginia, where two persons were drowned, hundreds of homes were washed away and property damage ran into several hundred thousand dollars.

Major highways throughout the central Shenandoah Valley were inundated for several hours, but most of them were cleared late Sunday for at least one-way traffic.

The State Highway Department reported that "a lot of secondary bridges" were washed away or damaged and that many secondary routes still were blocked by high water and landslides.

Flooded highway conditions were reported throughout the southern end of the Shenandoah Valley from Lexington to Roanoke and from west of Lexington eastward to Buena Vista.

High water also was reported in the Harrisonburg area extending into northern Virginia from Culpeper eastward to Fredericksburg and as far south as Bassett and Martinsville.

Property damage and loss of homes and life, however, was listed as small in the areas outside the lower part of the Shenandoah Valley.

Train Wreck Kills Two

GIBSONVILLE, N. C., Sept. 10.—(AP) The locomotive and 18 cars of a Southern Railway freight train piled up near the train station here early Sunday. Two trainmen were killed. Another was hospitalized.

At least eight of the cars, five of them carrying automobiles, caught fire after the wreck. Firemen from Gibsonville, Burlington and Greensboro fought the blaze for more than two hours.

Engineer P. A. Tronzo, Winston-Salem, N. C., was killed when his locomotive derailed. Fireman Arnold S. Jackson, of Spencer, died in the Alamance General Hospital at Burlington of burns several hours after the wreck.

Conductor E. W. Stope, also of Spencer, was in the Burlington Hospital with burns and bruises. His condition was not considered serious.

SHOW-CASE WINDOW, TOO!

Modern Touches Highlight Library

Traditionally, libraries are dusty edifices.

But the Atlanta Library's new Carnegie Way building, to be opened to the public late in October or early in November, will be "modern as tomorrow... anything but dusty."

That assurance comes from architects for the $840,000 structure. A progress report discloses such delights in store for library patrons as "electric eye" doors, air-conditioning, self-service elevators, an electric book lift, and a Forsyth Street "show case window" for outside browsing.

Patrons who complained of near-claustrophobia in old cramped quarters will find the original 38,000 square feet of space expanded to 82,000 square feet. The "old building," erected in 1906 on a bequest from the Carnegie Foundation, with lot and books donated by the "Young Men's Library Association of Atlanta," had room for 112,000 volumes.

New total book capacity is 380,000 volumes. Enlargement of the library required the purchase and wrecking of two small hotels, in addition to the construction cost. Renovations and expansions used Stone Mountain granite and "Cherokee" Georgia marble. Mullions in old windows were replaced with thin aluminum sash, resulting in "increasing daylight by almost 100 percent," architects said.

A sub-basement has been added to accommodate a "Bookmobile" garage, and there is provision for book stack extension above the roof. Sand-and-water cleaning has given remains of the age-discolored "old building" a face-lifting.

The pilot, Robert McNeil, Junction City; Ray Vermillion, of Aberdeen or Hoquiam, and Tony DeLauter, of Hoquiam. Mrs. Rothrock said her husband and the other three men took off from Moon Island at about 8 a. m. en route to Yakima, 200 miles inland, on a Civil Air Patrol problem. The plane crashed a few minutes later, approximately 20 miles from the takeoff point.

John C. Settemayer, Library Director, said the Forsyth Street at frequent intervals.

CAP Plane Falls; Four Killed

OLYMPIA, Wash., Sept. 10—(AP)—A civilian plane engaged in a Civil Air Patrol maneuver crashed and burned Sunday near McCleary, 20 miles west of here, killing its four occupants.

The craft was wrecked a few minutes after leaving Moon Island airport in the Grays Harbor area on the Pacific Coast.

The dead were identified as Chris Rothrock, 40, of Cosmopolis, the pilot; Robert McNeil, Junction City; Ray Vermillion, of Aberdeen or Hoquiam, and Tony DeLauter, of Hoquiam.

Mrs. Rothrock said her husband and the other three men took off from Moon Island at about 8 a. m. en route to Yakima, 200 miles inland, on a Civil Air Patrol problem. The plane crashed a few minutes later, approximately 20 miles from the takeoff point.

Two Trainmen Die in Wreck

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 10—(AP)—The engineer and fireman of a Louisville and Nashville passenger train were scalded to death by steam Sunday in a wreck four miles north of Evansville.

About 100 passengers on the train, No. 155 from Evansville to Louisville, were shaken up but uninjured.

The dead were Engineer Joe Hedden, 70, and Fireman E. Renfrow, 37, both of Louisville.

The engine jumped the track and overturned, pinning the trainmen in a cloud of live steam. Three baggage cars also were dragged off the track, but seven passenger cars remained on the rails.

L. & N. officials said they did not know what derailed the locomotive, but were investigating.

THE TRUTH ABOUT YOUR EYES AND TELEVISION

Motorola, leader in television, brings you good news from experts on your eyesight and TV!

Positively does NOT cause eyestrain. Seven letters tell the whole story—"MD's OK TV." This means that, with no "ifs" or "buts," America's leading eye doctors give television a clean bill of health. Says the authoritative Journal of the American Medical Association—"Television in itself does not produce eyestrain." Make a point to check this statement with your own eye specialist. He'll tell you—go right ahead and enjoy your favorite television programs for as long a period of time as you would read a book or look at the movies. TV can't hurt your eyes.

Where should I sit? Don't be misled by the mistaken notion that you should sit a foot away from the receiver for each inch of the screen's width. For instance, 19 feet away from a 19 inch screen. That's "silly" says the president of the New York Optometric Association. He recommends a viewing distance of from 64 to 10 feet for even the larger sized television screens. In other words—sit where you see best!

Two "don'ts." DON'T watch TV in total darkness. Soft indirect light at one side of screen makes viewing more pleasant. Same rule goes in daytime—so DON'T pull down the shades when you turn on your set.

Keen competition keeps the TV industry always on its toes. In the past two years, improvements have come thick and fast. Result—today's television picture is as easy on the eyes as anything you ever watched.

Motorola's leadership in cabinet design as well as performance is recognized with the 1950 Fashion Academy Gold Medal Award. Typical example of Motorola supremacy is this Combination Model 17FS. Clear, steady 16" picture, only 2 simple controls, Built-in-Antenna, FM/AM radio, "Multi-play" changer plays all record speeds, price only $429.95. View it at your dealer's along with other beautiful Motorola models from $189.95 to $650.00. Your eye tells why—Motorola is a better buy.
